WE ARE BACK on a sort of silver basis. By order of the President, all silver in the United States, except coins and fabricated articles, must be delivered to the Treasury, which will pay fifty and one one-hundredth cents per ounce. That would not suit William J. Bryan, who demanded a ratio of 16 to 1.

With gold selling at 35$ an ounce, President Roosevelt's silver price means a ratio of 70 to 1. But it creates a market for American silver, will create many enormous fortunes, and it delights Wall Street.

As the President's latest speech came in over the ticker, prices began dropping, traders were discouraged. Then suddenly the wise ticker man interrupted the speech to spread the good news that all stocks of silver bullion in the country could be sold to Uncle Sam for fifty and one hundredth cents an ounce. All was joy, stocks boomed, men shook hands, told each other at last there will be money in circulation.

Taxpayers need not shudder, they will not have to finance anything. Government will also take silver metal away from those that dig it up, and give them in exchange nice pieces of paper, silver certificates, at the rate of 64½ cents an ounce as at present. Those certificates will be good American dollars, good enough to buy anything in the United States, pay any debt or tax or tariff.

The President's wise and important step shows he realizes the fundamental trouble, lack of money in circulation, with those who have it afraid to spend or lend.

Now that there is to be more money, Heaven knows how much, it may be spent more freely.

When the stock market closed, those "autumnal leaves that strow the brooks in Vallombrosa" were scarce compared with the "plus" signs of the Stock Exchange. On almost every line it was "plus, plus, plus." Even utility stocks that have felt that they were playing the role of Uncle Tom, with President Roosevelt, with an extra big whip, playing Legree, lifted up their heads and smiled through their tears.

The "silver tonic" had a wonderful effect.

The question is, will the hundreds of millions of new silver paper dollars really get into general circulation, or will they sink deep into bank vaults, to be held frozen in the sacred name of "liquidity"

When men that dread "inflation" must admit that for prosperity you must have money in circulation, just as you must have water in circulation for fertility, blood in circulation if you want a body alive instead of dead, and chips in circulation if you want to play a game that calls for chips.

The New York Evening Journal city editor at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon "rather thought" that Mrs. Anna Antonio, convicted of hiring men to kill her husband, would not "go to the chair" after all. There was "a feeling around" that at the last moment Governor Lehman would forbid her execution, and change her punishment to life imprisonment. You know different today.

Prison officials, however were going ahead, the "chair" ready, current tested, barber prepared to cut the woman's hair from her head, that the wet electrode might be closely applied to the skull, and send the death current through the body to the calf of the leg, where another wet electrode would carry it on to the ground and leave death behind it. You must shave the head of a woman who is to be killed by electricity, because hair is a poor electric "conductor."

The condemned woman was unlike the average convicted

CLERGY REBEL AT HITLER OATH

PLOT AGAINST RELIGION CHARGED

Berlin, Aug. 10 (INS)—All German soldiers henceforth will be required to address Reichsleader Adolf Hitler as "Mein Fuehrer" (My Leader). This announcement was made to the army today by the War Minister, General von Blomberg, upon instructions from Hitler himself.

By Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 10—Clergymen throughout Germany are rebelling against swearing fealty to Chancellor Hitler, declaring the German ruler seeks to place himself above God and the Church.

A law requiring churchmen to take an oath of "fidelity and obedience" to Hitler is one of several enacted by the national synod. It is part of the Nazi program of a unified Protestant church.

MANY REFUSE OATH

Representatives of the Bavarian, Wurttemberg and Hanover state churches protested passage of the law. Many of them declare flatly they would not take the oath.

Some 800 clergymen already are under suspension for opposition to the chancellor and his church lieutenant, Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller. Those who refuse to take the oath face the same fate. Mueller has absolute authority over church matters.

The opposition maintains the old oath mixes things spiritual and temporal and makes it possible for Meuller to castigate every refusal to obey his orders as disobedience to Germany's dictator, Hitler.

BASIS OF PROTEST

Speakers for this faction at the Synod pointed out that in the oath Hitler was mentioned first, then the church order and only at the end the congregation, which, under Lutheran beliefs, should come at the beginning.

Dr. Kiebler, an old Nazi party member representing the Wurttemberg church state, openly charged Mueller had "messed up" the whole situation.

3 BANDITS IN GUARD UNIFORM LOOT PAY TRUCK OF $15,837

Three payroll robbers on masquerade as guards stole $15,837.32 from an armored truck parked in front of a Lowell bank today.

Escaping in two cars, they became the quarry in a far-flung manhunt directed by Boston's new police radio. All bridgeheads and highways leading into Boston were under guard of radio prowl cars, in the belief the bandits were headed this way.

Radio flashed a warning that Lowell police had tried and failed to stop a car hired earlier today in Cambridge by a Cambridge man. It was sighted speeding in the outskirts of Lowell with three young men in it.

AT BANK ENTRANCE

The loot comprised $14,167.02 payroll of the Lawrence Manufacturing Company and a $1670.30 payroll of the Royal Worsted Manufacturing Company.

The money, in two boxes, was stolen from an armored truck of the Safety Payroll Company, in use for the transfer of bank funds, while the car was parked unguarded at the John street entrance of the Union-Old Lowell National Bank in the very heart of Lowell's business district.

It was about 9:30 a. m. when the crime occurred and hundreds of persons were in the street in the vicinity, but the theft was not discovered for 15 minutes after it happened and police found only one witness of the actual crime. He hadn't realized what was taking place.

A man whose identity police kept secret, told them he saw two dark-colored sedans come to a stop behind the armored truck a minute after the truck guards, guns in hand, had carried out two boxes of currency and returned to the bank for another payroll.

U. GUARD'S UNIFORM

At about this time the witness saw a man in an olive-colored uniform like those of the guards—and with a gun in his hand—step out of the armored truck with two boxes, enter the car parked nearest the truck and drive away.

The suspicions of the witnesses were not aroused. The second parked car followed the first. It contained at least two men, one at the wheel also in a uniform like that of a guard. The cars swung from John street into Paige street and vanished.

UNAWARE OF THEFT

The real guards, Leo P. McGlinchey of North Chelmsford, and John F. Fitzgerald of Sayles street,

POPE ASKS AID IN FILM FIGHT

By Associated Press

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, Aug. 10—Pope Pius today urged that Motion Picture Publications support the campaign against objectionable films.

He told a group of delegates, who have been attending the International Cinematographic Press meeting in Venice that "comforting results" have been achieved by the movie cleanup movement in the United States.

He said that "all honest people" have given their adhesion to the movement.

His Holiness said that improper films harm not just religion but the whole field of public morals.

London, Aug. 10—Pope Pius will shortly issue an encyclical to the bishops of Germany which will emphasize strongly the pagan character of the Nazi movement, according to a Central News dispatch from Rome today.

'Keep Him Away' Asks Wife of Fugitive

"Am I and my children always to be hunted for the crimes of their father?

"Are we to be denied even the obscurity that is the natural companion of poverty?"

Mrs. Helen Rand Gilbert, wife of George Gilbert, who fled the Norfolk state prison colony four years ago and subsequently became the model husband of a Los Angeles girl, asked these questions today, in a tired, toneless voice, and without the vaguest hope that they would be answered to her satisfaction.

FR. COUGHLIN'S SILVER SOLD

By Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 10—The Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin, pastor of the Shrine of the Little Flower, said today that the Radio League of the Little Flower had sold all its silver holdings long before silver was nationalized by government order and that the profit was $12,000. He said:

"Months ago, as everyone knows, the league purchased 250,000 ounces of silver at various times, on margin. That was sold at a profit of $12,000 and the money spent on last year's radio broadcasts."

He denied vigorously a report that the league was prepared to surrender 250,000 unces of silver and that its profit would be $120,000.

DROUTH BREAKS ALL RECORDS

By International News Service

Washington, Aug. 10—The drouth raging over half the United States today had broken all records with no relief in sight.

The previous record for duration was mare by the 1930-31 drouth. Some Western areas, in the Dakotas and Montana, never experienced complete relief from this first calamity before the present long dry period descended.

Besides burning the crops of more than half of the counties in hauf of the states of America, it has seriously blighted virtually every major producing area of the world, including every Province of Canada.

Records show that drouth struck the United States in 1881, 1894, and later in 1901, 1911, 1918 and 1924.

Those of 1881 and 1894 burned an area almost comparable with the present disaster. At that time there were not the same huge crops and cattle herds, officials stated, so the damage was relatively light.

That sticky feeling that is causing so much discomfort is, in case you don't know, due to the humidity.

The weather man said today that the humidity is 84 per cent, which is 13 per cent above normal. Hence all the close clamminess that wilts collars and simmers the starch in gingham frocks.

Although the forecaster announces that it will be partly cloudy tonight and tomorrow, he holds out no hope of any change in the temperature save some gentle and moderate southerly winds.

There is a storm developing in the Mississippi valley, but there is no assurance that Boston is to receive any part of it.

MOTHER OF 3 PRAYS IN ELECTRIC CHAIR AS DEATH STRIKES

'I'M INNOCENT,' CRIES WOMAN TO WARDEN

By International News Service

Ossining, N. Y. Aug. 10—The case of 19-year-old Anna Antonio, who hated her husband, but loved her children, was finished today.

You could talk until doomsday about whether or not Anna Antonio was a murderess, but it would do no good.

For Anna Antonio is dead—dead—dead.

And then last night they harnessed her frail, self-starved body in the electric chair in Sing Sing prison and turned on the switch three times.

LAST THOUGHT OF THREE

The two men she was charged with hiring to kill her husband for $1800 insurance money followed her in the death chamber. They were Sam Farneti and Vincent Saetta who collected $125 for the murder.

Anna died with prayers on her gasping lips. She died without a struggle. She died thinking of her three young children—Phyllis, nine; Marie, seven (only yesterday), and Frankie, three.

Until the end, Anna could not understand why the law should consider her a murderess—even though she admitted knowing her husband was going to be killed.

Before she trudged the fifty steps from her death cell to the door which swings only one way she told Warden Lewis E. Lawes about it. She said:

"One of those men told me he was going to kill my husband. I said: 'I don't care if you do.' But I didn't kill my husband. If I wanted to kill him there were plenty of guns and dope in my house. I am not afraid to die, but I am worried about my children."

MAKES OWN SHROUD

In addition to three orphans, Anna left behind her a cricket, a canary and a sewing machine.

The cricket kept on chirping merrily in her empty cell. The canary kept on singing. The sewing machine alone was silent.

She had sewed enough clothes for her children, in her many months in the death house, to keep them for some time.

On her last day on earth she

Three times they reprieved her, spent most of it playing with three-year-old Frankie. They let her play ball in the prison yard with him. When he left, his mother gave him the rubber ball and an apple.

She would not let the older children see her for fear they might know.

When her time was called, Mrs. Antonio walked bravely from her cell along with Father Francis McCaffrey, the prison chaplain. She carried a crucifix.

Anna passed the two cells of the men she was charged with hiring as assassins.

WAITS FOR WITNESSES

She said: "Goodby."

They said: "Goodby."

Outside the little green door leading into the death chamber she was forced to wait for several minutes until the 30 witnesses were checked up.

The witnesses filed in to fill up the four wooden pews to the right of the menacing oaken chair. It was matched in texture and color by a table to the left on which lay towels. Crouched before it was Executioner Robert Elliott dipping a sponge into a pail of salt water.

Blue-shirted keepers with folded arms lined the wall.

The death chamber was lighted as brightly as Broadway, as a Hollywood set, as a prizefight ring.

HARNESSED TO DEATH

A wisp of a woman with flowing black hair moved through. She had refused the last sumptuous meal offered the condemned. She had not eaten for days. She walked weakly but unassisted to the throne of death.

LAW'S DEED DONE

At 11:15 p. m. they stepped back. Dr. Charles C. Sweet, chief prison physician, applied the stethescope. He pronounced:

"I declare this woman dead."

As if he had to state it.

A matron knelt and detached the leg straps. The keepers unloosened the other straps.

On one of her thin legs showed the scorch of the 2200 volts of electricity.

Straps were tightened across arms, chest, legs and abdomen. The condemned woman wore a fawn-colored stocking on her leg. Her right leg showed a sock. The calf was bare, the better to feel the electrode.

The masked helmet descended over her head and face, cutting short the mumble of her prayers . . .

There was the sound of a switch setting. Buzzing. Crackling. Sputtering.

Then: lifted her easily to the stretcher table.

Her black hair hung unkempt over a face the color of putty. The mouth was gray and open. It was not a lovely sight.

Farneti was next. He entered with a silly smile on his face. As they tinkered with the straps, he said:

"I'm going through but I am innocent. Gentlemen, I thank you and wish you luck all your life."

He was tough. He was a three-minute case. After three shocks, his heart was still beating. They gave him the works the fourth time and he was finished.

ALL IN 16 MINUTES

Saetta greeted the prison physician with a cheerful "Hello, Doc," as they trussed him to the chair. He died from the first terrific shock, his body surging forward as if it would rip the chair from its iron bolts.

It was all over at 11:20 p. m., 16 minutes. Thus did society use the stuff which Benjamin Franklin pulled down from the skies.

Baby in Death House Kiss

Mrs. Antonio's favorite trial photograph. This mother of the little boy and of two equally appealing little daughters, protested with her last breath her innocence of the murder of her husband. She was convicted with two confessed assassins of the murder for insurance. Thrice she was saved on the very brink of doom. Her fourth rendezvous with death was kept.

Just before Mrs. Anna Antonio went with bravery to the death chair, she implanted her farewell kiss upon the brow of Frankie, last born of her three children. "Believe me innocent always, baby!" she beseeched, half hysterical. Little Frankie, 3, is shown in Sing Sing's house of death—last home of the ones who pay the supreme price.

DEATH IN AGONY PAYS 4 TRIPS FOR MOTHER

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Anna Antonio, fourth woman to be executed in Sing Sing's death chamber, had prayed against despair that she be spared the agony of death in the electric chair. Three times she had been snatched from the very maw of the State's Juggernaut.

But Lady Luck was no longer a handmaiden. Three times—and out. Three times she had staked her all on faith, hope and charity. But at last the law was to strike her out. Hope and charity had deserted her. All she had left was faith in God's favor.

On June 28 she was scheduled to pay for her blue print murder of "love and lucre." She had been "barbered." There she cringed with her shaven head. Tears beleaguered with fear.

And then a reprieve from the governor.

A reprieve of 30 minutes just six minutes before she was to "walk the walk of eternity."

HARBINGER OF DOOM

Vincent Saetta, one of her hired assassins of her husband so proved the state, had made a death cell confession exonerating her and taking all the blame of the "bump off."

Then the 30-minute grace had been extended while the Governor in Albany studied the "confession" and there she literally died.

In the electrocution room stood Elliott, the "thin man," the harbinger of death at the "switch." It was to be a harvest night for him. One hundred and fifty dollars "a head." Three—that meant $450.

Whid-eyed, she stared at Father McCaffery. Her lips were grave dry, Jejune her face. About her the arm of Mrs. Lucy Many, the matron, who was to "accompany" her to the chair. The niceties of chaperonage.

Before the cell the big, grim "P. K." the symbol of the avenging law. At his right would begin the "Last Mile." But he stood like a Sphinx. Her fear-chiselled eyes raced from one to the other about her. Any minute the summons to death.

FOUR AGONIZING HOURS

And so for four solid hours this agony went on. It was an ordeal worse than the chair itself. Four hours of an agonizing death struggle. A paroxysm of mental anguish never known before in the whole sordid history of the Death House. Four hours—every split second of it a living death—waiting, hoping, praying.

And there the grim law—also waiting, watching the "game" of fox and hunted. Here now with this little sparrow of a woman—young—but 29—and two of her birthdays spent in her death cell—mother of three children—being made the battleground of the "man's law." And then, at 3 a. m. of June 29, the word that the Governor had granted a "reprieve of 24 hours."

Like a broken reed, she slumped in the cement floor of her cell. She could cry no more. She managed to gasp:

"Thank God! He has not forsaken me. And the good Governor."

"A WOMAN ALREADY DEAD"

It was Mrs. Lucy Many, the matron, who lifted her like a child and put her in her prison bed. And there she lay like one in stupor. And the big "P. K." and the other "servers" went to their posts. They went the whisper that come what may—however it changed—he would never be the same. They said:

"If she rides the law will kill a woman already dead."

Epidemic Fells 17 More in Jersey

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 10 (UP)—Despite the efforts of health authorities to check the disease, 17 new victims of dysentery were reported here, bringing the number of isolated patients under care to 175.

The Board of Health issued a general request to the city's 500 physicians to make prompt reports of new cases. It was hoped in this way the Board of Health could take instant action to prevent the spread of the malady, believed to be attributed to some form of food infection.

CLERGY REBEL AT HITLER'S ORDERS

Germany died on August 1 and that the news was withheld for 24 hours, according to an article published in the Daily Herald today.

The article says that a clash between Hermann Wilhelm Goering, premier of Prussia, and Dr. Joseph Paul Goebbels, Hitler's minister of propaganda, over which one would become chancellor when Hitler succeeded Hindenburg in the presidency, was interrupted by news of Hindenburg's death.

The cabinet was taken so unawares, according to the Herald story, that word was flashed to the doctors in attendance to withhold news of the death and to continue to issue official bulletins on Hindenburg's condition.

Finding that neither Goering nor Goebbels would give in to the other, Hitler, the story said, decided to take both offices, to which the cabinet agreed rather than risk a war between the two powerful men of the Hitler government.

Several German newspapers, it was pointed out, announced the death as occurring "on the afternoon of Wednesday," but were promptly admonished by the ministry of propaganda for "inaccuracy."

Hess Favored for Deputy to Hitler

Berlin, Aug. 10 (INS)—General Werner von Blomberg, minister of war, who was reported yesterday to be the most probable choice as first assistant to Reichsleader Hitler in administering the affairs of Nazi Germany, was today reported to have been sidetracked.

At a secret meeting last night several members of the cabinet are said to have opposed Von Blomberg's appointment, not on personal grounds but because he is the choice of the army, and they felt the army had already gained too powerful a position in the Reich.

Rudolph Hess, acting leader of the Nazi party, is now said to have the inside track, and unless the Reichswehrist changes his mind and picks Gen. Goering, Hess' appointment probably will be announced after the August 19 plebiscite when the nation will record its approval of Hitler's action in assuming the presidential prerogatives.

Hapsburg Refuses to Honor Dollfuss

Copenhagen, Denmark, Aug. 10—The Archduke Otto, whose movements are being followed with interest as talk of Hapsburg restoration in Austria is heard, declined an invitation to assist in a memorial service here for the slain Chancellor, Engelbert Dollfuss.

Otto was inclined to accept, but his companions, Count Heinrich Von Degenfeld and Count Alexander Pallavicini, persuaded him to decline in order to avoid the possibility of unpleasant incidents.

Boy Driver Causes Flood in Malden

It took city workers half an hour to shut off the geyser of water, which, in the meantime, flooded basements. The boy is to be charged with operating a motor vehicle without a license.

School Janitor Hurt in Fall

A 25-foot fall to a concrete pavement, when his safety belt slipped, resulted in William A. Sullivan, 42, of Oak avenue, West Roxbury, being at City Hospital today, suffering from fractures of both legs, a broken right hand, and other injuries.

Sullivan was cleaning windows of the Henry Vane School, Belgrade street, West Roxbury, of which he is custodian, when the accident occurred.

Hitch-Hiker Dies in Fall From Truck

A fall or jump from the rear of an oil truck trailer resulted in the death of Antonio Bollite, 30, of West Ninth street, South Boston, on Dorchester avenue, Dorchester.

Police believe he was hitch-hiking his way home from Fore River, where he was employed. The driver of the truck, Francis H. Derbyshire, of Mt. Blue street, Norwell, said he did not see Bollite board the trailer.

Greenfield Bank Finds Bogus Bills

Greenfield, Aug. 10—A local bank in investigating today the finding of three counterfeit bills among their deposits.

Doug Romance Fades Out

Douglas Fairbanks has started his return journey from England to Hollywood, presumably for a reconciliation with Mary Pickford. The start of the trip was the end of his romance with Lady Ashley, of England. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

Doug's Trip Ends Romance With British Lady Ashley

Hollywood, Aug. 10 — Douglas Fairbanks is leaving England for good. He has made his last picture in the British Isles and will, in the future, do his producing at the United Artists Studios, here in Hollywood. This is not a surmise or a guess but a definite cablegram from someone close to Mr. Fairbanks, who is in the know and to whom the star confided his plans.

FAREWELL TO LADY ASHLEY

When Doug said goodbye to England he also said farewell to his romance with Lady Sylvia Ashley. After spending a year constantly in her company he sailed for America, without telling her that he was returning to the country of his birth, with his two friends and advisers, Joseph Schenck and Darryl Zanuck. Lady Ashley had no inkling that her close friend was on the S. S. Rex until a Universal Service reporter acquainted her with the unpleasant truth.

Douglas will not be in England in October when Lord Ashley's suit for divorce against his former chorus girl wife is heard in the British courts. Doug will be here in Hollywood and more than likely at Pickfair with Mary Pickford by his side, making plans for his next motion picture.

A reconciliation, at no time since their separation has been even discussed until now. I believe there is more than a possibility that Mary will forgive Doug whom she has always loved.

MARY EXCITED

Over the long distance telephone today Mary said that she may leave Chicago on Saturday for Hollywood. She was excited over the homecoming of Doug.

I took the privilege of an old friend and asked her if she would listen to Doug's plea for forgiveness. She replied:

"Anyone is apt to do wrong. I cannot say what I will do until I have talked with Douglas."

HEEDS DOUG'S PLEA

But there was a different tone in her voice than at any time since Doug got himself so unpleasantly headlined.

I do know that Douglas' earnest request that Mary refrain from taking any legal action against him until he had a chance to talk, to her will be heeded.

PLYMOUTH BOY DIES IN CRASH

According to police, the driver lost control rounding a curve.

2 LOOT STORE, FLEE WITH $2

Within a block of state prison, two armed bandits walked into a chain store at 30½ Washington street, Charlestown, today and held up the clerk, Timothy O'Connell, who lives in Lock street, Cambridge.

They got only $2 from the cash register.

The bandits forced O'Connell and a 76-year-old customer into a rear room and threatened them if they moved.

Dorothy Childs, 25, of Washington street, Charlestown gave police the registration number of the car. Police said it was a stolen machine.

ROOSEVELT AIM IS WORLD UNIT OF MONEY

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Aug. 10—President Roosevelt cast his eyes abroad today in contemplation of agreements with foreign powers which would set up a monetary unit more equitable and stable in its purchasing and debt paying power.

Marching another epoch making event in the reinvamped system of the American monetary system, the government was ready to carry out the edict which will seize all silver bullion in the United States in order to build up the 3-1 gold-silver basis for paper currency.

Within 90 days all accumulated stocks of silver bullion must be turned into the Treasury under the order providing for nationalization at 50.01 cents an ounce.

SILVER BUILDUP

This is a program which eventually will build the government's silver stocks to more than two billion dollars, as compared with about eight billion dollars in gold.

On the basis of testimony before congressional committee that there is upwards of 250 million ounces of accumulated silver in the country, outstanding at $1,000,000,000, and considering the silver money more in silver must be acquired in the program of building up a silver reserve equal to one-quarter of the gold supply which is close to eight billion dollars.

Considering the present gold stock, about two billion dollars in silver will be required to meet the ratio contemplated in the silver purchase act. The accumulated stocks of silver will be the basis for the issuance of around 325 million dollars in certificates under the monetary rule of $1.29 an ounce. Nearly 500 million dollars in silver certificates are now in circulation.

The Treasury stands to make a profit of about 600 million dollars on silver provided all stocks are used as a basis for issuance of paper money at the rate of $1.29 an ounce as is desired by the congressional inflationary group.

Imported silver will be exempt from seizure under the executive order and will become free metal subject to trading in the ordinary course of commercial transactions.

EXPECT NEW ORDER

However, the treasury may at any time issue a new nationalization order which would bring all silver in the country at the time into the hands of the government at whatever price is determined upon up to the statutory limit of $1.29.

Assurance was given by Morgenthau that there will be an adequate supply of silver for uses in the arts and industries. Licenses will be issued for this type of silver. Industries, such as jewelry, silver plating companies, piano manufacturers and others will be permitted to retain reasonable amounts of silver as necessary for their business.

Thomas, Reynolds See 'Gold Grip' Weakening

By International News Service

Washington, Aug. 10—Sweeping changes in the world's monetary system with an international conference on money in the near future, were visualized today by two senators who have been active in behalf of silver.

Senators Thomas (D) of Oklahoma and Reynolds (D) of North Carolina, upheld the administration's nationalization of silver will bring about another world monetary conference.

Thomas and Reynolds agreed the new monetary policy would "weaken the death grip" gold has maintained on many nations.

Chicago, Aug. 10—Night life at the World's Fair has gone on a virtually unrestricted basis. Concessions known as "bright spots" had complained they could not compete with city cabarets because fair gates closed at midnight, so now the fair is to be open 24 hours a day.

Woman May Save Siam King's Eyes

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 10—May Turner Black, wife of a city official, the next few months may perform a delicate operation in an effort to save the failing eyesight of King Prajadhipok of Siam.

Dr. Balch, through her secretary, said she had been asked to do the operation and that it may be performed if the monarch is able to travel to the United States.

Judge Cox ruled that Sayre's oral trust with Mrs. Anastasia Pitts of Nantucket is binding.

WIDOW URGED ARREST OF MATE'S FRIEND

No Other Way, Says Wife of Official; Intimacy Cited

Harvard, Aug. 10—The 22-year old widow of Police Chief Roy H. Houghton collapsed today after declaring that she, herself, had counselled the arrest of Edwin H. Wilson, a close friend, whose case so preyed upon her husband's mind that he committed suicide.

But, the pretty, college-trained bride of three months maintained, the circumstances of the Wilson affair left no other road open to Chief Houghton, since he was sworn to perform the duties of his office.

Chief Houghton was obliged to arrest Wilson three weeks ago when a Harvard woman, interested in social service, complained against certain conditions in the Wilson home. For years, the police head, who was only 28, and Wilson had been close friends.

Mrs. Houghton revealed that her husband told her of the complaint and that she accompanied him on subsequent investigations. Then, she said, she counselled Wilson's arrest as the only honorable course left open.

Chief Houghton, with the assistance of a state trooper, took Wilson into custody, at the time telling him:

"I'm sorry to have to do this, Ed, old boy."

Last Saturday Wilson was arraigned in Clinton court. One of his three daughters was a witness against him. Chief Houghton was visibly shaken at the time and after he got home from court he began to brood.

He didn't eat or sleep for long stretches since then, it was said. He talked continually about Wilson at home.

When he met townspeople he kept telling them how sorry he was that it had all happened. He was continually apologizing for his action in arresting his friend, acquaintances declared.

The climax came yesterday when the chief shot himself through the head with his service revolver, only a short distance from home.

The Houghtons eloped to New Hampshire about three months ago where they were married and spent their honeymoon. They were regarded as ideally happy. Mrs. Houghton is a former Leominster girl.

The youthful police chief was a member of many fraternal and civic organizations, including the Aye; Lodge of Masons. He entered police work 18 months ago.

BANDIT PAIR SLUG VICTIM

Holdup men, who traveled in pairs, had a busy night and in one case they left a victim bleeding and unconscious near one of the entrances to Franklin Park.

This bandit pair was spotlessly clad, one in white linens, the other in white flannel trousers with a dark coat. A woman accompanied them. They set upon Clifford H. Powell, of Forest Hills street, Forest Hills, beat him to the ground, possibly with a gun butt, stole his watch and $14.

The other holdup victim was Charles H. Smith, 50, of Huntington avenue, Back Bay. He was entering his doorway at 1:10 a. m. when a youth seized him by the throat. Another youth went through Smith's pockets, took 35 and a gold watch. Both assailants were described as dark, and about 24 years old.

OLSON UPHOLDS MARTIAL LAW

By Universal Service

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 10—Governor Floyd B. Olson stated here he would ignore an injunction to restrain him from using state troops to maintain martial law.

He made his defiant challenge before three federal judges who took under advisement a petition of employers asking that troops be removed from this city in the strike of 7000 truck drivers.

The employers sought the injunction claiming the maintenance of troops is hurting their business to the extent of many thousands of dollars daily.

ITALY TO KEEP ARMY AT FRONT

By Universal Service.

Rome, Aug. 10 (US)—Making preparations for any eventualities in the disturbed European situation, Premier Mussolini has ordered 50,000 troops, which he dispatched to the Austrian frontier at the time Chancellor Dollfuss was assassinated, to be held there indefinitely for intensive training in Alpine warfare.

At the same time, the Italian Government announced that the annual army maneuvers beginning August 19 in the Appenines would emphasize frontier warfare, both offensive and defensive.

In short, the remainder of this month will see one of the greatest concentrations in Italian history, with troops in the northern section at waging mimic war aimed at tearing open enemy frontiers to permit access of the entire Italian Army.

Until today, it had been indicated that the four divisions mobilized near Brenner Pass would be withdrawn, but Mussolini decided that as long as they were there, they might as well be trained in mountain warfare, thus, in effect, increasing the strength of the frontier guard by 50,000 men.

For the maneuvers a mythical frontier will be established in the Appenines and the opposing armies will be placed close to each side and will try to blast the defenses of the other and invade the enemy's territory.

792-LB. TUNA FIGHTS 3 DAYS

By Associated Press

Liverpool, N. S., Aug. 10—A battle for nearly three days and nights with a giant tuna fish, the dream of every deep-sea angler, was the happy realization today of Thomas Howell, Chicago grain market operator. Landed after a 62-hour tussle, said to be the longest on record, the tuna weighed 792 pounds, beating by 12 pounds the local record-breaker caught off here a few years ago by Zane Grey, the novelist.

Howell and several companions took turns at the line in a rough sea and were near exhaustion at the end of the thrilling combat. The game fish hauled Howell's 38-ton yacht, Thalis, for 200 miles before it surrendered.

Howell used an extremely fine 36-thread tuna line, 350 yards long and a 26-ounce hickory rod. Mrs. Howell and Thomas Howell, Jr., were on the Thalis, manned by a crew of 20.

Bandit Pair Slug Victim Near Park

There is a quaint old custom of playing jokes on a newly married couple, but a pair of Lynn honeymooners were the ones who had the laugh on their friends today.

This bandit pair set upon Clifford H. Powell, of Forest Hills street, Forest Hills, beat him with a gun butt and stole his watch and $14.

The other victim was charles H. Smith, 50, of Huntington avenue. He was entering his doorway and a gold watch,

U. S. OPENS WAR ON GUN THEFTS AT ARMORIES

So bold have bandits become in raiding national guard armories for pistols, machine guns and ammunition that the Department of Justice, most powerful arm of the federal goverment, has been called in to halt these raids.

This fact, hitherto a secret, was revealed today. At the same time Governor Ely and chief executives of other states were assured by the Department of Justice that the U. S. War Department had also pledged co-operation against the bandits.

With this news came estimates of the arsenal supplies stolen. In Massachusetts alone, in the past 20 months, more than 100 automatic rifles and pistols and hundreds of rounds of ammunition have been looted from a dozen state armories.

Totals for this and 20 other states in the same period show stealing of more than a thousand guns, including ten of the most modern of machine guns, and more than 25,000 rounds of ammunition.

Acting U. S. Attorney-General William Stanley declared that people must become more interested in protecting their firearms, since the best way for criminals to get guns is to steal them. He concluded:

"And the criminals have to get guns somewhere in order to operate."

Some of the more important raids in this state were listed as:

January, 1932—Lynn armory, 20 pistols.

February 13, 1932—Wakefield armory, four .45-calibre pistols.

February 22, 1932—Cambridge armory, seven automatic pistols; Chelsea armory, 11 automatic pistols.

July 18, 1932—Sergeant Charles Edwards wounded as he wounds thief in battling a raid on guns in Commonwealth avenue armory, Boston.

It will be recalled that the Millen brother and Abe Faber, who were convicted of murder in the Needham Bank holdup and double killings, used a machine gun stolen from a state armory, and, according to police, confessed that one of their methods of getting firearms was to raid armories.

Missing Husband Feared Suicide

A letter from her missing husband, stating that he was trying to gather courage enough to commit suicide, set police looking today for the spouse of Mrs. Goldie Freedman of Westmore road, Dorchester.

Mrs. Freedman said that her husband is 27 years old, 5 feet 5 inches in height and weighs 185 pounds. He was wearing a blue shirt, grey soft hat and a red necktie when last seen.

Gilbert is en route here from California in custody of Officers Winthrop M. Lauf and David McLaughlin.

Sea Weed and East Wind to End Drouth, Thinks Writer

By Associated Press

New York, Aug. 10—Fragrant seaweed and East winds on the Atlantic Coast presage the end of the drouth in the Midwest, in the opinion of a Bostonian.

"Questioner" has written to the New York Sun from a city blessed at times during a hot spell with an east wind that cools the city quickly:

"The east wind has returned again to revitalize the land and the seaweed along the coast is coming back. Those of us who know salt water from years of close friendship with it, can tell by the texture and fragrance of the mighty deep what its promises are, and it always keeps its promises.

"The fresh salt smell of the ocean along the Atlantic coast means something good for man, an alkaline moisture that probably acts as a great catalyzer of the atmospheric wave lengths of the rain, sending it definitely to the parched lands.

"The pall of the well-baked prairies for the fresh rains from the Atlantic comes every 50 years or so, when the storms from the Pacific stop climbing over the rockies and give the Atlantic Ocean a break."

The last great revitalizer of the west from the Atlantic writes "questioner," was a blizzard in March, 1888. During this summer's drouth the east wind lost its seaweed fragrance and the seaweed, now returning, almost disappeared.

"In the next few weeks or months," concludes the writer, "we may see the sea change that will revive the entire land."

Sarah Palfrey Cheered by Fiance Fabyan

Sarah Palfrey, Brookline's gift to women's tennis and hope of the East to capture the national championship at Forest Hills next week, is particularly anxious to lift today's final of the Longwood Bowl singles championship.

For no other than Marshal Fabyan, Jr., social registerite son of Dr. Marshal Fabyan of Beverly, will be in the grandstand rooting hard for his bride-to-be of the coming fall season.

Little Sarah (she stands five feet two) and the elongated blond Fabyan (he tops a good six feet three) are to be married, probably in October, at the Palfrey summer home in Sharon.

They await sister Lee Palfrey's marriage in late September to Harry Fullerton, Scottish geologist. This marriage will also take place at Sharon.

Young Fabyan, a Harvard graduate, is to start in the banking business here this fall. He was an eager onlooker as Sarah overpowered Mrs. Marjorie Morrill Painter in the semifinal round at Longwood.

Both he and Sarah are loathe to be photographed together. In fact Sarah is so insistant on the point that the pair are seldom seen together in public.

However, the Boston Evening American caught them in informal pose, together with two other Palfrey sisters, Polly and Joan, as they sat at one of Longwood's mixed doubles matches late yesterday afternoon.

U. S. TO LESSEN CROPS CURB

By Associated Press

Washington, Aug. 10—The AAA's far-reaching program of crop reduction is expected to be abandoned in part for 1935.

An announcement to this effect is awaited as a result of the July report on the condition of the nation's crops, due today. The change in plans would be only temporary.

Drouth is the reason. The scourge of aridity has continued to harass the farmer since the report for June predicted wheat, oats and corn production as far below normal.

Supervision of production will not be abandoned next year. The system of contracting for reductions, possibly bringing a number of crops under a single contract, and making benefit payments, will continue, whether or not the cuts actually are executed.

Church Balks Romance of Irish Star

JOHN FARROW MAUREEN O'SULLIVAN

Maureen O'Sullivan Is Refused Right to Wed in Dublin

By Associated Press

Dublin, Irish Free State, Aug. 10—A reliable source said that Maureen O'Sullivan, motion picture star, and her fiance, John Farrow, movis writer, who arrived today from Liverpool, have been denied permission to marry in the pro-Cathedral of Dublin.

Friends stated a special dispensation had been sought, but that strong opposition by the clery was expected. They said they believed the couple may wed in England.

In Liverpool, Miss O'Sullivan, who met her father there, said:

"I hope Mr. Farrow and myself will be married before long. We are here to discuss the matter with my parents."

Miss O'Sullivan is Irish, Farrow is an Australian.

COUNCIL URGED TO KILL 1880 SHORTS BAN

While Boston's park department officials ducked for shelter from the storm they created by resurrecting an 1880 blue law to back up their shorts' ban, City Councillor Maurice M. Goldman entered the lists today as champion of the syncopated attire.

The Dorchester councillor declared that he would father a measure to kill the blue law once and for all. He said:

PROSECUTION UNLIKELY

"I regard the issue as nearly as important as the repeal of the prohibition law, and I am going to tell the council so next Monday. It's a silly rule that would require the fair sex to be clad in swimming suits, or tennis garb for that matter—'from neck to knee.'"

Meanwhile hardly an official soul in the park department was to be found who would allow himself to be quoted as threatening the little girls who flaunt Park Commissioner Long's edict against shorts for sports.

While it was admitted that the blue law had been regarded as sanction for the shorts ruling, there was little likelihood that any prosecutions would be made.

Girl, who either don't care about "silly rules" or are perfectly willing to be martyrs for the cause of shorts, continued to appear today on municipal tennis courts clad in the scanty panties.

The fact was, there appeared to be more of them than when all this excitement started. But wasn't that always the way?

WORCESTER WEAKENS

One further factor also appeared, favoring the shorts advocates. It was the declaration of chairman Davis D. Kenniston of the metropolitan park commission that no action would be taken in his jurisdiction either unless complaints were entered.

In most of Massachusetts cities, except Worcester and Lowell, everyone in official high places appears favorable to the shorts idea, even Worcester was weakening. Deputy Police Chief Thomas McMurray said:

"We won't arrest girls for failing to observe the neck-to-knee rule. We're not interested in 1880 blue laws."

The latest community to go on record as favorable to the shorts clan was Malden.

A reporter visited three of the city's tennis courts in mid-afternoon. On all of them a large number were playing tennis garbed in shorts than these garbed in more conventional attire.

SHOE STRIKERS STORM TRIAL OF PICKETS

More than 100 pickets arrested in connection with demonstrations and open warfare at the Gregory-Read Wood Heel Company, in Malden's Eastern avenue, today were automatically convicted of sauntering and loitering without even going to court.

However, this wholesale disposition of their cases depends on their acceptance of their attorney's agreement to have them stand or fall by the four "master" cases that were tried today.

These cases resulted in convictions and the imposition of $10 fines by Judge Elbridge G. Davis in a courtroom crowded to the window jams with union sympathizers.

APPEALS FILED

The four on trial today were Fred D. Ryan, Timothy F. Curley, William J. Devereaux and Joseph L. Major, all of Lynn, and all arrested last Thursday.

They pleaded not guilty, and immediately appealed their convictions. They were released in bail of $100, personal recognizance.

Police Lieutenant Clarence E. Lenihan, who acted as prosecutor, charged them with violating a Malden city ordinance which orders persons to "move on" five minutes after being warned by an officer.

Attorney Joseph Bearak, appearing for the four, argued that the statutes of Massachusetts permitted peaceful picketing and that the city ordinance applied only to corner loafers, who—unlike his clients—had no definite purpose for being in the streets.

HEARING SET

In a bench conference following disposition of the four cases, it was agreed that the remaining 135 defendants should appear in court next Thursday, briefly enter pleas of not guilty, accept findings of guilty and $10 fines, and then appeal their cases to the Superior court.

Bail in each case is to be $100, personal recognizance.

Meanwhile, word was received from Haverhill that shoe workers there had postponed until Monday their picketing pilgrimage to the Malden heel plant.

Informed of this, Attorney Henry R. Mayo, who represented the Gregory-Read firm in court, said that he would go into Superior court today to seek an injunction against the demonstrators who seek to unionize the Malden plant.

Extra police, armed with tear gas bombs were detailed about the courtroom and the corridors of the building, as well as outside, ready for any demonstration.

The huge turnout, police believed, was due to the circularizing of Malden by Communists.

POSTERS URGE SUPPORT

A flood of posters, signed by the Young Communist League, 451 Cross street, Malden, urged workers to appear in court in support of the arrested pickets and to show opposition to "Yellow Dog" shoe contracts.

Communists in two automobiles distributed the "Yellow Dog" circulars during the night, police said.

The circulars appealed to all workers at the Gregory-Read plant to join the union and "repudiate the Yellow Dog" contracts under which they were working.

This, the Communist manifesto argued, was the "Yellow Dog" contract, and was illegal in Massachusetts.

Furthermore, the circular declared, the factory owners were assisted by police who "viciously attacked the pickets, arresting 200 of them," and "beating up" some of them.

BOSTON WOMAN HOLDUP VICTIM

By Associated Press

Troy, N. Y., Aug. 10—Police pressed a search throughout the East today for four bandits who held up five persons along a lonely road at Burden Lake, near here, last night and robbed them of $6800 in cash and two diamond rings worth $1000 each.

Victims of the holdup, summer residents Averill Park, are Jules Lerner, 35, of New York city; Pearl Yarns, also of New York; Harlah Daniels, Waterville, Me., and Gertrude Cohen, Boston.

Four armed men ran from a wooded patch, marched them 30 yards into the brush at gun point and bound each with pieces of clothesline, making them lie face downward. One of the women, not tied as tightly as the others, freed herself, released the others and notified state police.

WOMAN HELD IN HAMMER CASE

Mrs. Alice M. Stedman of Great Pines avenue, Burlington, pleaded not guilty in Woburn today to assault and battery with a hammer on Mrs. Mary B. Connolly, 29, of State road, Billerica, Wednesday in the Stedman home.

Bail, which was set at $5000 when Mrs. Stedman was arrested last night, was reduced to $500 and he; case was continued to August 15. Mrs. Connolly is in Choate Memorial Hospital.

FAMILIES FLEE SO. BOSTON FIRE

Ten families were driven to the street in night clothing this morning when fire in a garage between Broadway and Athens street, near B street, South Boston, spread to surrounding tenements.

Nearly two dozen rabbits and a score of chickens lost their lives when the flames spread to the home of Mrs. Frances Bankus in B street. The livestock was owned by John Bankus, 13, and his sister Victoria, 11. John succeeded in rescuing six of his rabbits.

Persons driven out in the surrounding tenements included Mrs. Bridget Flynn and her son, Martin, Miss Mollie McGrath, Miss Jennie Houghton, A. J. Lang, Elizabeth and Sadie Clougherty, all of B street.

Keep Him Away, Pleads Wife of Fugitive

woman bigamously and was the father of two children by this marriage also came as a startling piece of information to the gunman-fugitive's legal wife.

"I never want to see him again."

Emphatically and finally, her eyes flashing and her hands beating a nervous tattoo on her lap, she made that statement, as she gazed out on the peaceful, rolling green fields surrounding the little, frame cottage in which she was born and where her parents have lived for 41 years.

PITIES BIGAMOUS WIFE

And, then, her eyes softening as she picked up a newspaper with a photograph of Gilbert's young wife embracing him just before he was manacled to two officers of the Norfolk Prison colony, who are bringing him back here, she said:

"The poor child, and only 20 years old. My heart aches for her. What a cruel shock it must have been to her to learn that her model husband was an escaped criminal!

"If they hadn't caught up with him, he probably would have continued being a model husband to the end. He wasn't a bad fellow. In fact, he was a good husband and a splendid father until he met up with the wrong companions. The lure of easy money was his ruination.

"When we were first married —we were married just 15 years ago last July 28—he and his brother Joe, had built up a fine business. They were arborists and they had a little shop in Roxbury. But George thought they weren't making money fast enough. He always dressed well and liked a good time and he wanted success to come quickly.

"But we were very happy. He was a kind husband, and he was especially tender and thoughtful to me when Cynthia, our first baby, was born. Cyntoia is 14 now, and then there came Connie, who is 11; Gloria, nine, and "Sonny," or Edwin, four."

LINKED TO UNDERWORLD

It was just before Connie was born, Mrs. Gilbert recalls, that her husband began to absent himself from home. She learned there were other women. Rumors came to her that he was frequently in the company of certain underworld underlings.

"These are desperate times for me and my young family. I am 'on the welfare' but it is only through the most careful managing that we get along. And then it is only from week to week. Sometimes I wonder how we can keep going. But, critical as our situation is, it is a vast improvement over those years when I actually feared for my life if I left my husband and yet, living with him and suspecting vaguely his criminal activities, I was in misery every minute of it.

"I hope and pray that the return of George Gilbert to Massachusetts will have no part in my life.

"The instant I discovered his criminal activities I put him out of my heart. And the minute I parted from him at Norfolk Prison I put him out of my life. All that has kept me from divorcing him is the want of $25 for legal fees—the immediate necessity of providing food and shelter for my children has used up all my resources."

FATHER JOBLESS

Edwin N. Rand, Mrs. Gilbert's father, deplored his inability to aid his daughter financially. A carpenter by trade he has been out of work for the past four years. Failure to rent several summer cottages on his property; the cost of repairing one of them which had been practically sliced from its foundations during a recent "twister" and the expense of an operation and hospitalization for his wife are just a few of his recent financial setbacks.

A photograph of the good looking Gilbert in a detective story magazine was his undoing. A neighbor of Gilbert who was living a most exemplary life in Los Angeles as George W. Parker, reading a particular story of a spectacular bit of crime, noted the marked resemblance of the photograph illustrating it to his acquaintance, Parker He no sooner reported his suspicions to Captain Norris Stensland of the sheriff's office at Los Angeles than "Mr. Parker" was taken into custody.

PLEADED FOR MERCY

The latter pleaded for mercy, pointing to his home and his guiltless existence in California. Nevertheless, the Massachusetts prison authorities were notified. They insisted that Gilbert be turned over.

Governor Merriam, of California, was appealed to and responded sympathetically, at first. Then, informed of Gilbert's bigamous marriage, he acceded to Governor Ely's demand that Gilbert be brought back to pay his debt to the state of Massachusetts.

ROOSEVELT TO PUSH POLICIES OF NEW DEAL

By International News Service

Enroute with President Roosevelt to Washington, Aug. 10—President Roosevelt is returning to Washington today from his transcontinental trip, the first he has made as President, well satisfied with the results.

His advocacy of the New Deal, the philosophy of government which he enunciated early in his administration, is unchanged. If anything he is more confirmed than ever in his belief that the times call for new governmental remedies.

In the past week, Mr. Roosevelt has literally seen millions of people who addressed hundreds of thousands. He had inspected dam-sites, irrigation projects, attended picnics and banquets, seen the results of the great drouth, talked with political candidates, and out of it all he has arrived at certain conclusions.

PLANS POWER EXPANSION

These might be summarized as follows:

1—The policy of federal power development, as embodied in numerous projects in the West, is to be continued and expanded wherever possible, no matter what the private ownership people may think of it.

2—So-called progressive principles are to be pursued by every candidate bearing the Democratic label on this campaign.

3—The Democratic campaign is to be definitely aligned with the Progressive Republicans of the West.

In California, the Democrats have already openly endorsed Senator Hiram Johnson, Republican, for re-election. In New Mexico, Senator Bronson S. Cutting has been given the administration's unofficial blessing. In Nebraska, administration support has been thrown unofficially to Congressman Edward R. Burke, a new dealer, as against "Brother Charlie" Byran.

BACKS NEW DEAL

In Wisconsin yesterday, Mr. Roosevelt went out of his way to show his affection and regard for "Young Bob" LaFollette, who is running independently on a third party ticket.

While Wisconsin Democrats gnashed their teeth, Mr. Roosevelt described LaFollette as "my good friend," and praised the Wisconsin idea of government, from which he said he had "drawn much."

The President brought his trip to a close in a militant, fighting spirit. He made it plain that there is to be no backing up in the new deal policies.

Remarried

MARY CUSHMAN WEDS AGAIN

Many a young socialite matron who read the despatches from Reno today sighed, and in her mind's eye turned the calendar back a decade or so to the days when she was a flapper and Mary Elliott was the Harvard College bride of Charles Van Brunt Cushman.

For the news that Mrs. Cushman had become the bride of Jean Jacques Bertschman of New York revived the memories of the romance that thrilled blue blood circles in Boston and Connecticut back in 1923.

3 FAKE GUARDS STEAL $15,837

Lowell, failed to notice the theft when they placed another payroll in the truck.

The drove first to the newspaper plant of the Lowell Courier-Citizen, and delivered one payroll.

Then they drove to the Lawrence Manufacturing Company and discovered they had no payroll to deliver there. A hasty check showed that the Royal Worsted Manufacturing Company payroll was also gone.

The alarm was immediately flashed to police but the thieves had at least a 15-minute start.

THREE IN TWO AUTOS

The sole witnesses thought the first car that had parked behind the truck contained only the "guard" who drove it away, and that the following machine contained two men, but said he wasn't sure.

There were at least three men in the two cars, it was established by Inspectors Patrick Clark and Frank J. O'Dea of Lowell police.

The witness thought each bandit car carried a six-number registration plate starting with the digit "5".

Lowell police teletypes carried the alarm to Boston police headquarters and this alarm was flashed over the air:

"Calling all cars, calling all cars! Bank robbery at Lowell. Three or more men in two dark-colored sedans both carrying registration plates in the five hundred thousands."

HUE AND CRY IS ON

One by one the radio cruisers were diverted from their regular patrol areas and directed to proceed to the bridges and highways at the city entrances.

State police radio at Framingham mobilized State police cruisers on the roads outside Lowell, concentrating between Lowell and Lawrence and Lowell and Boston.

The Boston broadcast was the first since the inauguration of radio to direct all cars to a guard along the city borders.

While they were on guard, bandits using an automobile staged a holdup at a Charlestown chain store and got away.

RECALLS $100,000 THEFT

A later Boston broadcast told of failure of attempts to stop the car hired by a Cambridge man. It had been hired from the Mount Auburn Auto Company. The first number of its registration is "3." The complete number was given in the broadcast.

The Lowell-Old Union National Bank figured on New Year's Day, 1933, in a $100,000 mail robbery.

Currency in shipment from the bank disappeared from a mail truck before it reached the Lowell railroad station.

The mail truck driver and a mail clerk were later arrested, and the loot was recovered from a cache in the North Tewksbury woods.

TODAY

male murderer, who orders a hearty dinner of beefsteak and pie the night before the execution, and ham and eggs for breakfast in the morning. She could eat nothing. On Wednesday night she heard a cricket in the death house, "a good sign."

Following an old German custom, which demands magnanimity and compassion on important occasions, Hitler, about to add the highest official place in Germany to his dictatorship, proclaims amnesty for political prisoners. Between 8000 and 10,000 locked up in concentration camps will be released, including many Jews, imprisoned in the camp principally because they were Jews, or objected to unjust treatment of Jews.

If Chancellor Hitler would let those concentration camps remain empty, abandon racial hatreds, his foolish "Aryan" fairy story, and leave religious matters to Divine Providence, confining himself to promoting the welfare of Germany, he might take a most important and a highly honored place in history. He has known how to gain the confidence of the German people, how to restore hope to Germany's 60,000,000. Too bad that he should ruin such possibilities by futile race and religious hatreds.

This happened in Spain. A Barcelona butcher, told that a strange man was visiting his wife (they are very particular about such things in Spain), rushed back, found nobody, took his wife to a moving picture, first slamming the door of the big icebox.

Next morning, in the ice box, was the visiting stranger, dead, frozen. In Poe's story, the man sealed up his hated rival in his wine cellar. The ice box is simpler. In some parts of Spain, that would be called a miracle of revenge.

As President Roosevelt travelled through the drouth-stricken country, showers, more or less light, followed him in several places. That also would have been called a miracle at one time. But, unfortunately, it takes more than any recorded weather miracle to provide for our troubles, we are so big. You could hardly ask a miracle to stretch from Seattle to Miami.

TRAGEDY YOUTH APPEARS LIKE 'SCARED BOY'

By Universal Service

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Aug. 10—Robert Edwards, the handsome hometown Lothario accused of the "American Tragedy" murder of his sweetheart, was described here as a "scared boy," sitting in his lonely cell with nothing to do but think of the looming shadow of the electric chair.

The 21-year old mining surveyor, described by his friends as a "grand lover" and a "swell guy," confessed to police that he killed his neighborhood sweetheart, Freda McKechnie, with a blackjack while the two were swimming in Harvey's Lake, so that his path might be clear to wed his new love.

But the other girl, Margaret Crain, 23, music teacher of Aurora, N. Y., has not communicated with Robby since he entered his cell in murderer's row, said Warden William B. Healey, who added:

"The only mail he's had is some religious papers from church people in Connecticut."

16 Teams in 'Knockout' Test in Bridge Tourney

By Associated Press

Asbury Park, N. J., Aug. 10—Sixteen teams of the nation's outstanding contract bridge players begin "knockout" competition today for the American Bridge League's national open team-of-four championship.

Leading the teams to qualify last night was the 1934 cast of the "Four Horsemen." This team of New Yorkers—Oswald Jacoby, David Burnstine, Richard L. Frey and Howard L. Schenken—had been tied for eighth place at the halfway mark of elimination play.

Seven of the 64 players on the qualifying teams are women. Among them is Mrs. Ely Culbertson. It is the first appearance of either of the Culbertsons in the annual Asbury Park tournament since 1930.

Second highest place went to a Brooklyn, N. Y., team composed of J. y T. Feteus, Robert Chatkin, William Vanderpoten and Paul N. Weiner.

The afternoon session was devoted to the opening of another blue ribbon event, the Jasters' Pairs. Seeking to eliminate desperate bidding, the committee announced the standing of only the five leading teams. They were, in order:

Aaron Frank and Jeff Click, Clev'and, Ohio; Samuel Katz and Ernest Seibert, Newark, N. J.; Frey and Schenken; Louis J. Haddad, Chicago, and Philip Steiner, Cincinnati; and Charles H. Porter and William F. Hopkins, Cleveland.

LIQUOR LABELS MUST TELL ALL

By Associated Press

Washington, Aug. 10—The Federal Alcohol Control Administration promulgated new orders today requiring distilleries to tell customers what is in the stuff.

For labels, the FACA demands: Brand name and class and type of distilled spirits; name and address of distiller, rectifier or importer or bottler if bottled by other than producer; alcoholic content by proof, except for such specialties as ready mixed highballs, fizzes, cordials and liqueurs; quantity or net contents; a statement regarding any excessive coloring or flavoring material.

Neutral spirits, the FACA says, "are practically pure alcohol," but, it is added:

"When used as a blending material with straight whiskey they are required to be derived solely from grain, i. e., must be pure grain alcohol."

The Internal Revenue Bureau, after announcing it had decided to authorize use of wood alcohol to denature alcohol, yesterday postponed indefinitely the appliestion of the order. The bureau offered no reason for the postponement.

2 OCEAN FLIERS TELL TROUBLES

By Associated Press

London, Aug. 10—After a sound night's sleep Leonard Reid and James R. Ayling appeared fully recovered today from their fatiguing flight over the Atlantic, in which they battled fog and dense clouds.

Their future plans were undecided. The two landed at Heston Airdrome late yesterday, having traveled approximately 3700 of the 4500 miles from Ontario to Baghdad, their goal. It was assumed Reid and Ayling would not continue on to Asia Minor.

Carburetor trouble, the fliers said, used up their gasoline supply at a rapid rate. The engines consumed 17 to 18 gallons an hour instead of the usual 10.

New York, Aug. 10 (INS)—Declaring in a farewell note "she hated to be melodramatic, but was disgusted with life," Dorothy Phillips Hauser, pretty 25-year-old commercial artist, gave a gay party in Greenwich Village and committed suicide by gas after the last guest had departed. WOMEN GRILL CANDIDATES ON RINGS

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

In a questionnaire sent out by the Massachusetts League of Women Voters, one of the largest women's organizations in the state, every candidate for governor, Lieutenant-Governor and members of the Legislature is asked to state his position on the question of reorganization of county government.

In addition the candidates are further requested to state their position in regard to consolidating the county training schools into two units.

The headquarters office at 31 Mt. Vernon street, has also suggested to their local leagues throughout the state that they solicit an answer to these two questions:

SUBMIT 2 QUESTIONS

1—From candidates for county officers in general:

"What functions of government do you believe that counties perform which could not be as well rendered by the state, city or town?"

2—From candidates for county commissioner:

"Do you advocate any change in the use of the county training schools?"

The action of the league in calling on the candidates for their positions on the present unwieldly obsolete and duplicating system as exists, is in line with a growing demand from taxpayers from all parts of the state for sharp reduction of this form of expensive government.

Preliminary to taking action looking to the filing of a bill and the investigation of the county system, a special meeting has been called for August 28 in the Hotel Bradford by the Massachusetts Political Club, Inc., another state-wide non-partisan organization.

MULLEN GIVES AID

Co-operation in the movement to agitate about county reform is also pledged by John J. Mullen, chairman of the board of assessors of Saugus, candidate for county commissioner of Essex County.

Mullen, ex-mayor of Everett, asserted that in this county Lynn is booked $191,500, Lawrence $153,000, Peabody $35,385, Salem $78,292, Gloucester $52,473, Newburyport $19,503 and Saugus $20,245.

In a statement Mullen declared:

"The people are being drained for the upkeep of the counties and they are getting little for this money. If I am elected the people will know for the first time the inside workings of the county rings.

"I say lower the expenses of the counties, clean out the waste and let the people and not the rings rule. If the people feel that the counties should be abolished or consolidated, I will, if elected, do all I can to bring that wish about."

BARRY OPPOSES SEN. WALSH

Providing that sufficient signatures are secured and certified by the 5 o'clock deadline, former Lieutenant-Governor Edward P. Barry of Jamaica Plain will contest the Democratic nomination for senator against David I. Walsh.

Barry, who served on Beacon Hill in 1914 as second in command to the then Governor Walsh, has acceded to the pleas of his friends that he run. Up to yesterday, he was adverse to going in, saying that it meant a considerable sacrifice to his law business.

Heartily in sympathy with the movement to challenge Walsh's nomination, Barry had hoped that former District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien would agree to be the contestant. O'Brien, however, lacked financial assistance to make the fight.

Navy Takes Over Coast Guard Radio

The U. S. Navy will handle the coast guard communication service within the Boston area, Captain Cecil Gabbett, head of this division, has announced.

Equipment from the Winthrop radio station, now operated by the coast guard, will be moved to the Navy Yard, where, in a short time and as soon as navy men are acquainted with the equipment and system, they will be in charge of the message traffic.

Brodbeck Quits, Backs Ward, Burke

Withdrawing his candidacy for legislature in Ward 9, John C. Brodbeck, 370 Shawmut avenue, South End, today announced he would support Rep. Michael J. Ward and Frank J. Burke who are seeking Democratic nominations for legislative seats in the primaries.

Snake Victim Relies on God

By Associated Press

Sylva, N. C., Aug. 10—A holiness preacher, Albert Teester, near death from rattlesnake bites he received in a demonstration to his flock that "the faithful are immune," refused steadfastly today to accept medical care. The mountain preacher said:

"I am a disciple of God. He will take care of it."

The preacher, who claimed he could undergo any tortures without injury because of his faith, stood in his pulpit Sunday night, held aloft the rattlesnake and called upon the congregation to witness that the reptile could not hurt him.

Twice the snake's head flashed. Twice its fangs sank into Teester's arm. A friend offered corn whiskey —but Teester would have none of it. He would permit no medicine, no doctor.

Today his arm had swollen until the skin burst. His back and neck puffed, and his swollen tongue almost filled his mouth. A little food from a spoon, but no medicine, was still his edict.

LABOR TURNS GUNS ON BACON

By vote of 133 to 2, delegates to the annual convention of Massachusetts Safe Federation of Labor stood today in denouncement of Gaspar G. Bacon, candidate for the Republican nomination for governor.

The vote came on a resolution after hours of oratory, included lengthy speeches in defense of the present lieutenant governor by his two supporters, John McLaren, a member of the Boston Stone Masons' Union and William H. Thornton of the Worcester Molders' Union.

Chief critics of Lieutenant-Governor Bacon demanded to know whether he "had the audacity to intimate that he had ever been friendly, sympathetic or sincere "in his dealings with labor problems."

McLaren argued that similar charges were disproved when Bacon ran for lieutenant-governor, but his arguments went for naught when the final vote was taken.

Rehoboth, Aug. 10—Gaspar G. Bacon, Republican candidate for governor, said he was willing to appear before labor leaders who had denounced him, answer their criticisms and accept the consequences.

Speaking at a clambake of the First Bristol District Republican Council, Bacon said he had been denounced by the State Federation of Labor for 12 votes he had cast over a period of eight years.

He asked that "honest citizens not be misjudged by the words of certain labor leaders" and said he would willingly go before any group of labor leaders, give the reasons for his votes and accept the consequences.

Biarritz, France, Aug. 10—The Prince of Wale's only feminine companion today, and for the past several days, has been Mrs. Wallace Simpson, formerly of Baltimore, said to be a descendant of Governor Wakefield, of Maryland's early days.

Wales danced with her all night until 3:30 in the morning at Ambrose Casino, and they are seen together frequently at lunch and dinner and sunbathing on the beach.

Mrs. Simpson is petite and auburn haired. She is called "Wally," an abbreviation of her maiden name, Wallace. She is married to an Englishman, and has lived in England for some time.

Budget Back in the News

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Looks like the commercial budget will be balanced by the drought.

With prices higher because food is scarcer, we will have to pay more for less. And that's the toughest kind of bookkeeping we know of.

Seems we might have learned a lesson from the ancient prophets, who warned Egypt of seven years of locusts, seven years of drought and seven years of famine.

Those old-time prophets never threw anything but sevens.

Instead of plowing our groceries under, we should stow them away against bad seasons.

Sir Gerald Campbell says America is keeping its sense of humor.

That's right. We laugh ourselves to sleep every night counting sheep that bite like tigers.

HOME REPAIRS DRIVE BEGUN BY MOFFETT

By International News Service

Washington, Aug. 10—Opening a drive to spart $1,600,000,000 worth of private building repairs, James A. Moffett, federal housing administrator, informed banks and financial institutions today the program "presents an opportunity and a challenge," to them.

His summons accompanied a statement explaining steps to be taken by financial organizations and home owners. The statement was relayed to every institution in the country. It said:

"Of the 18,000,000 buildings in this country in more or less serious state of disrepair, some 5,000,000 have already reached such a state that nothing short of a major building operation can save them.

"Many have deteriorated so badly they should be demolished.

RELIEF FOR JOBLESS

"The situation presents an opportunity and a challenge not merely to stop destruction of property values but to provide employment for hundreds of thousands of those workers who have suffered most severely from the depression."

Moffett explained how an individual property own, after deciding on the improvement he wants, and having obtained estimates and determined how he wants the job done, may proceed.

He may do his own work or hire workers, or a contractor, and buy his materials from any source that suits him. He may go directly to an approved bank, and fill out a credit statement. When this is approved, he signs a promissory note and is given the money in cash.

TWO OTHER PLANS

There are two other plans, one for industrial banks, and one for finance companies. In the former case, the property owner presents his credit statement, and in the latter the owner submits his credit statement to a contractor or dealer, who in turn submits it to a financial institution for approval. If approved, the contractor proceeds with the work.

Upon completion the owner gives the contractor a promissory note. The contractor, after endorsing this note, sells it to the financial institution concerned, and is given cash in payment for his work.

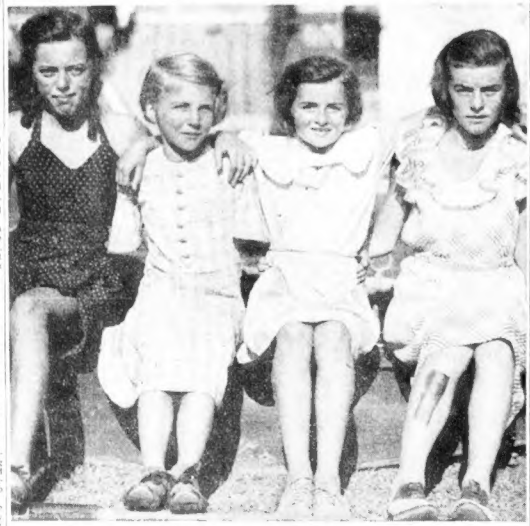
Four Young Heroines Come to Front



CAROL TUITE SHIRLEY McLEAN CLARE McDONOUGH MARY GALLAGHER

Four young heroines, Carol Tuite, Mary Gallagher, Clare McDonough and Shirley McLean, are shown after their brave rescue of Harold Rose and his two grandchildren. Seeing the capsized sailboat the four young girls braved the choppy waters in a rowboat and went to the rescue. Rose managed to keep his two grandchildren above the water until the four girls came to his aid. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

4 GIRLS SAVE 3 IN BOAT

A Cambridge grandfather, Harold Rose, 58, heaped thanks upon six Quincy children today for their daring rescue of himself and his two small grandchildren from drowning off Hough's Neck, Quincy.

Clinging to their capsized sailboat, the two grandchildren, Herbert and Edmund McFall, five and eight respectively, were led safely to shore by John McDonough, 22, an Leonard Davis, 14, both of Quincy.

Rose kept the children above water until help for them arrived, was save t by four girls, Clare McDonough, 10, a sister of Agnes, Carol Tuitt, 10; Mary Gallagher and Shirley McLellan, 11, who braved the choppy waters in a small row boat.

'FIRST MOTHER' IN BOAT DASH

By International News Service

Havre, France, Aug. 10—After a wild dash by automobile from Paris, Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the American President, concluded her European tour and sailed for the United States, leaving France as one of the most popular Americans ever to visit her shores.

A whim almost caused the captain of the liner Ile De France to delay sailing.

She left Paris by motor so late she had virtually no margin to make her ship at Havre. Then she impulsively decided to stop over at Rouen to see the cathedral. Despite the warning of her chauffeur that she might not make the liner, she looked over the famous landmark for 20 minutes.

"It's too beautiful to miss," she remarked.

Then the driver was forced to speed at a terrific rate over the narrow French highways. Just before the scheduled sailing moment, Mrs. Roosevelt dashed up the gangplank all out of breath.

West Steals Music Capital Honor, Says Ex-Bostonian

Mid-western cities, where the spirit of enterprise and the presence of foreign-born population prevail, have supplanted Boston as America's center of music.

This opinion was expressed by Arthur Shepherd, former instructor at the New England Conservatory of Music and now head of the department of music at Western Reserve University, Cleveland, who is in Boston as the guest of Fabien Sevitzky, the conductor.

Cleveland, Shepherd declared, is an example of a mid-western city whose rank as a center of culture has been raised at the expense of the east.

Mr. Shepherd pointed out that wherever there has been an appreciable musical development there have been present a foreign-born population with a continental understanding of the arts.

"The coming of age" of American music, in general, was also given by him as a contributing factor to the increasing musical development of cities in the West and midwest.

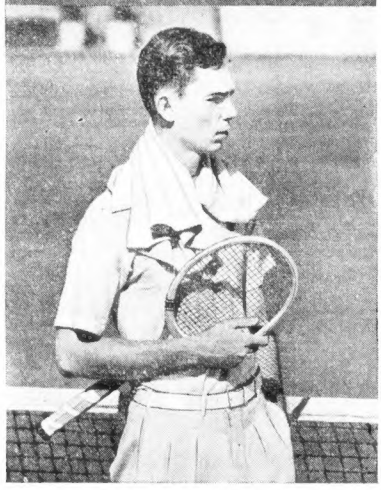
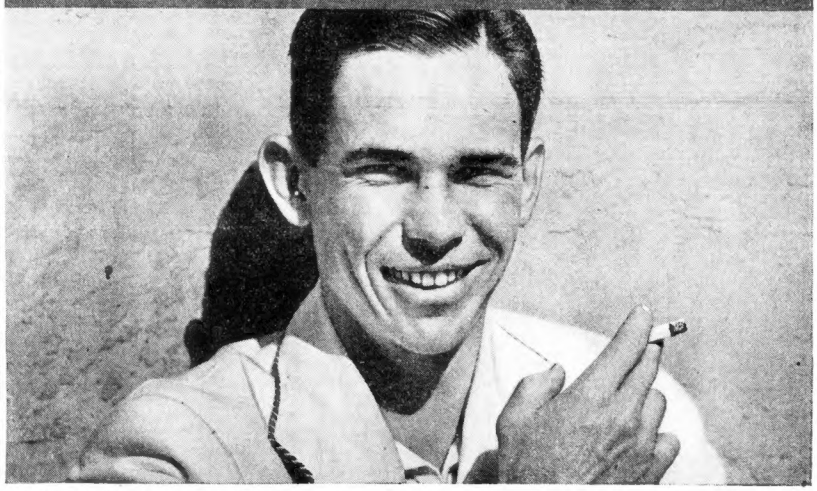
AFTER 5 HARD SETS—



—and then he Smoked a Camel!



AT THE TOP OF THE HEAP IN TENNIS! That is the enviable position of Ellsworth Vines, Jr., the spectacular young Pasadena athletic star who holds the U. S. National Championships for 1931 and 1932, and has now swept through the 1934 professional ranks as well!

YOU'LL enjoy this pleasing "Energizing Effect"

—now newly explained by Science

When you've used up your energy at work or play—smoke a Camel and notice how soon you feel your flow of natural energy snap back.

This experience, long known to Camel smokers, has now been confirmed by a famous New York research laboratory. Camel smokers enjoy a positive "energizing effect"...a healthful and delightful release of natural, vibrant energy. Millions have found this to be true. A typical Camel experience is this, Ellsworth Vines, Jr. speaking—

"Championship tennis is one of the fastest of modern sports. After four or five sets, you sometimes feel that you just can't take another step. That's when a Camel tastes like a million dollars. Not only does the rich, mellow fragrance appeal to my taste, but Camels have a refreshing way of bringing my energy up to a higher level. And I can smoke all the Camels I want, for they don't interfere with my nerves."

So, whenever you want a "lift," just smoke a Camel. You can smoke them steadily. For the finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS in Camels never get on your nerves.

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS —Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand.

36 DIE AS HEAT KEEPS GRIP ON MID-WEST

By the Associated Press

The heat wave held on tenaciously today, with a steadily mounting toll of victims.

Thirty-six persons are known to have perished during the past few days as a result of the record-breaking temperatures that baked the mid-continent with no immediate general relief in sight.

A cool wave, reported sweeping down on the stricken areas from the far Northwest, failed to put in its appearance yesterday, and temperatures skyrocketed far beyond the century mark at a number of points.

SCORES PROSTRATED

Scores were prostrated. Further crop losses were reported.

Texas had 15 deaths. Nebraska counted seven dead since last Saturday and, although rains fell throughout the state, reports said that little was left of grains, pastures, potatoes, forage crops and gardens.

It was 103 in Lincoln, Nebraska's capital, yesterday—the fifth day in which 101 was exceeded in the past week.

Missouri has had three heat deaths since the current hot spell began, Illinois three, Indiana and Arkansas one each; Wisconsin, Michigan and Ohio two each, while Ohio in addition counted five deaths as an indirect result.

FIVE DROWNED

These five were drowning victims. Electrical storms hit Dayton, Columbus, Sidney and Springfield, Ohio. One man was killed by lightning in Springfield.

Four other persons perished near Denver in a terrific rain and hail storm.

The Rocky Mountain region was cooler, but the central west and southwest boiled. Nowata, Okla., had a maximum temperature reading of 114. Kansas City, where two of the Missouri death victims were reported, had a high of 110.

The mercury hit 113 at Emporia, Kas., further complicating the water shortage problem.

Emporia authorities attempted to conserve water by limiting the depth of bath tub water to four inches.

Science to Let 'Dead' Dog Die a Natural Death

By Associated Press

Berkeley, Cal., Aug. 10 — "Thirteen," the fox terrier Dr. K. K. Cornish clinically put to death and then revived, will be allowed to die a natural death.

Dr. Cornish disclosed today he has reached this decision after giving careful consideration to the suggestion of a fellow scientist that study of the dog's brain might reveal more of value than would be learned by continuing to nurse him back to the maximum health, which is possible.

Improvement of the dog's condition has been slow and Dr. Cornish thinks it will be months yet, at best, before he is able to walk. No medical treatment has been administered since the first week following April 23, when Thirteen's original life was terminated for three or four minutes, under clinical definitions, further to research into methods of revivication of persons whose heartbeat circulation has been stopped by shock or asphyxiation. The dog was given gas.

Nursing has been limited to selection of a proper diet and keeping the canine warm. He is not able to stand unassisted.

Said Dr. Cornish:

"He would eat a pound of meat a day if we would give it to him, and while his improvement is so slow as to be scarcely apparent, it is evident he is gaining gradually in strength."

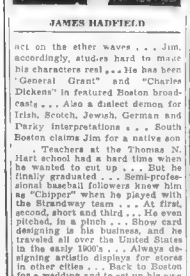
You Hear Him on Your Radio



JAMES HADFIELD

Life on the radio begins at 43

At least it did for James Hadfield now 43, and among the 4 actors extraordinary . . . It isn't easy to act on the ether waves . . . Jim, accordingly, studies hard to make his characters real . . . He has been "General Grant" and "Charles Dickens" in featured Boston broadcasts . . . Also a dialect demon for Irish, Scotch, Jewish, German and Parky interpretations . . . South Boston claims Jim for a native son

Teachers at the Thomas N. Hart school had a hard time when he wanted to cut up . . . But he finally graduated . . . Semi-professional baseball followers knew him as "Chipper" when he played with the Strandway team . . . At first, second, short and third . . . He even pitched, in a pinch . . . Show card designing is his business, and he traveled all over the United States in the early 1900's . . . Always designing artistic displays for stores in other cities . . . Back to Boston for a wedding and to set up his own establishment . . . Entertaining at private functions brought out his flare for mimicry . . . He has imitated everyone of any consequence . . . The radio field appealed strongly, and a certain Radio Editor ushered him through to the man who arranges for auditions . . . Jim clicked with a Chinese monologue and the "mike" men listening had to laugh . . . all the while his "other business" kept growing until he brought his 21-year-old son into the office to be attended to his radio engagements. Five children call him Dad at home in Dorchester . . . He still thinks the really great radio program has not been produced and hopes to be in it when it happens . . . Always took in the heavy dramatic plays as a boy. Admired such actors and actresses as John Barrymore, Margaret Anglin, Nance O'Neill and Denman Thompson . . . Is a champion bowler, helping the Boston City League team of 1917 to roll up the highest Hub score on record, namely 1725 . . . Stands 6 feet 8 inches high is still 'chipper' and acts that way and all things new . . . Weighs 167 pounds including his sun mustache . . . Signs his name James G. Hadfield, the "G" inserted to provoke questions, which it does. Furthermore he has no middle name.

(Tomorrow's radio personality portrait will be that of Carl Moore, the "Rambling Rhymester," who would have been a salesman but couldn't sell anything except a song and his services as a pianist.)

LEHMAN WIRED BY ROOSEVELT

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 10—President Roosevelt has sent his congratulations to Governor Lehman, his former assistant-governor for his decision to seek reelection the governor revealed here.

The governor disclosed that the President was one of the first to send him a message of congratulations after his announcement in a radio broadcast of his decision to run. Alfred E. Smith and ex-Governor General James A. Farley were two other Democratic leaders who forwarded their good wishes.

"Did he say he was for you, Governor?" Mr. Lehman was asked. The governor only smiled. Then he said: "The President sent me a very nice telegram. He has known how I felt about this all along."

Bandit Jailed 12 Hours After Vermont Battle

St. Johnsbury, Vt., Aug. 10—The speed of Vermont justice was exemplified here when less than 12 hours after he had engaged in a thrilling pistol battle with Sheriff Frederick A. Flint, William H. Wilson, 21, of Ivy st., Boston, found himself on route to the state prison under sentence of from 12 to 20 years.

The youth, arraigned immediately after his capture before Judge Nathan A. Norton in municipal court here, pleaded guilty to a charge of attempted robbery while armed.

Sheriff Faint set out on the trail of Wilson when residents of the district complained of a marauder who had been attempting to steal automobiles from private garages.

The sheriff came upon the youth crouched by the side of the highway as he was driving along a lonely stretch of road running over Barnet mountain, just south of here.

As he began to question Wilson, the youth confronted Faint with a pistol and a curt demand to turn over his money. The sheriff instead dived into the underbrush, dodging a shower of bullets that only ceased when he succeeded in cornering his man.

Wilson admitted to the court he had committed ten robberies in New Hampshire last month, all of which have been verified by New Hampshire police.

This Is Life
by
ROBERT E. ROGERS

Robt. E. Rogers

Praise from Sir Hubert, as the proverb has it, is praise indeed. That is why Jay Franklin's article about New England, called "The Yankee Individualist" and printed in the current "Vanity Fair," makes good reading for the inhabitants of this stern and rockbound coast. For once an article written by an outsider more or less agrees with our own opinion of ourselves.

Jay Franklin is not one to scatter praise and adulation loosely. As a matter of fact, he is not inclined to scatter it at all. He is the gentleman who was for a time a member of the State Department in Washington and who, while thus employed, wrote for "Vanity Fair" a series of such searching and ironic articles on the American political scene, both domestic and international, that presently his resignation was accepted, he was eased out, bounced—in short, fired. My impression is that Jay Franklin is a pen name. His real moniker I do not know.

His theme—and it is one which rings pleasurably in these old Yankee ears—is Massachusetts "unreconstructed and unrepentant," and the Northerner who feels that "there is more virtue in his little finger than in the whole of the collectivist body politic."

We have our ups and downs. In the days of the Coolidge boom we were generally looked upon as timid, unprogressive, unAmerican, and backward because we did not go altogether haywire over non-existent values. Then there was a swing of sentiment, we are told, as the rest of the country began to recognize that our banks, businesses, industries and homes were considerably safer there than in other parts of the U. S. We suffered, of course but never to the extent observable in the rasher and more "progressive" sections of the country.

* * *

The third step followed automatically. Since New England and the northeast generally had so much money, let's take it away from those states and distribute it to the poor relations. Let the ant not merely keep the grass-hopper alive during the long cold winter but also furnish it with such luxuries as it had never earned for itself, plus a comfortable annuity for life. And the fourth step, no less naturally, is that New England is beginning to get up on its ear and is beginning to consider burying the old sock deep under the hearthstone where no federal tax collector can find it.

Briefly put, this is what Mr. Franklin's article deals with, written in tones of mild and tempered admiration for the old Yankee stock, yet admiration, nevertheless, such as his pen is not accustomed to. He understands our Yankee conviction that we pioneered, colonized, settled and financed the rest of the country, not to mention educating it and giving it its civilization. He quotes with approval the saying of an American journalist that the result of the Roosevelt election (1932) would be an historic conflict between the East and West comparable even to the Civil War.

* * *

He has his statistics; that the states from Maine to the Potomac and to the Ohio are geographically only one-sixth of the land but contain one-third of the population and supply many times its quota of cash to the expenses of the federal government and the relief of the more backward states.

Mr. Franklin rates us as the last of the laissez-faire individualists, in which I suspect he is perfectly correct, free from illusions and fictions particularly free from modern economic fairy-tales.

"The North went through the panics of 1818, 1837, 1857, 1873, 1893, 1903, 1907 and 1921 without whimpering. The North suffered far more keenly than the West and South have ever suffered from depressions. The North learned to take its medicine and is surprised to learn that it should now be considered necessary to interpose legal barriers between economic cause and effect. The North would accept universal bankruptcy or general revolt philosophically, but sees no reason why these simple, practical methods of readjustment to supply and demand should be feared and scorned. Free men and responsible individuals, the North thinks, should not shrink from the consequences of an economic mistake or the true character of political reform. But it does feel that either those consequences or this reform should take place at the expense of other people. 'Let the farmers lose their land!' say the Northerner. 'Our farmers lost theirs until they learned how not to lose it. Let banks and businesses go to the wall, without government loans. Our banks used to go broke, too, and businesses went bankrupt, until we mastered the necessary caution and cunning.'"

* * *

Harsh words, perhaps, but on the whole they have the New England ring. The doctrine of personal responsibility, stripped of social altruism. Such an explanation, by the way, puts a pleasanter light on the late President Coolidge's inactivity in those days when the country was shooting toward disaster. His detractors insist that he didn't know anything was wrong and was capable of doing nothing if he did.

This month his accession to the presidency is to be remembered. Here is a thought for the day. Possibly Calvin Coolidge knew perfectly well what was coming, but did not consider it any part of his job or the government's job to save fools from their folly. Possibly he sat grimly by, knowing the crash was coming, confident that it would teach the American people the much needed lesson of responsibility. But he didn't see far enough ahead. He did not foresee Roosevelt. He forgot, in the words of Al Smith, that no one ever shoots Santa Claus. New England, alone, remains true to his faith and his certainty.

Schools to Open Later in Medford

Medford boys and girls rejoiced today over the postponement of the opening of all public schools from September 6 to 11.

Action was taken by the school board on the grounds that hot weather usually persists well into September.

Fair Mermaids Keep Old Sol Smiling at Swampscott

DORIS BATCHELER ANNE O'BRIEN MARGARET EASTWOOD

Old Sol had a fairly easy day of it at Swampscott beach. Bathers there, you know, depend a great deal on the smiles of Mr. Sun. But it so happened that three mermaids arrived at the scene, and added their smiles voluntarily. Naturally enough, the beach was just radiant with warmth and smiles. The three volunteer Soleteers are Doris Batcheler, Anne O'Brien, daughter of Judge O'Brien of Salem, and Margaret Eastwood, and they outdid Old Mr. Sol himself at smiling. Milk Dealer Faces Court in AAA License Test

With the Eastern Massachusetts Milk Dealers, Inc., in open rebellion against the AAA, the first case to come under the Secretary of the Agriculture Act of dairy farmers of this state today was scheduled for a hearing before Federal Judge Hugh D. McLellan on August 20.

On that date Edward M Dwyer of 324 Washington street, South Weymouth, milk dealer and AAA, he should not be enjoined from carrying on a milk business with out a federal license.

SUIT FILED BY WALLACE

A bill in equity asking for an injunction against Dwyer is already been filed by United States District Attorney Francis J. W. Ford on the ground that Dwyer has violated the Agricultural Adjustment Act. The petition is signed by Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace in his capacity as administrator of the AAA.

Dwyer, the first man in this area to defy the New Deal measure, was first hailed into court on May 8 to show cause why his license should not be revoked because he had violated the Greater Boston milk marketing agreement. He finally lost his license on June 26.

Dwyer is backed by the Massachusetts Dairymen's Association and the Eastern Massachusetts Milk Dealers, Inc., are also expected to take a keen interest in the case.

RUINS FARMERS, CLAIM

John E. Burr, of Beverly, secretary of the organization, whose firm, Larose and Burr, has had its license revoked by Washington, said:

"To comply with the marketing license terms and to give money into the equalization fund means ruination for the farmers of the state."

He cited a number of milk dealers who have lost their permits and said:

"This means that the government is giving our organization a 'ride' because we have been unwilling to see the funds of Massachusetts farmers go to the farmers of Vermont and the West."

IN-LAWS SUED FOR $25,000

A $25,000 alienation of affections suit has been brought by Mrs. Gladys A. Christianson of Brockton against her parents-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard M. W. Christianson of Fuller street, Dorchester.

The younger Mrs. Christianson charges that her husband and adopted son, Arthur, were influenced to go to Sweden to live by the defendants.

She said that she was married on Armistice Day, 1931, and lived with her husband until March 27 of this year.

Wakefield Tax Drops 60 Cents

A tax rate reduction of 60 cents was announced to Wakefield citizens today.

A lower valuation loss than bargained for, made a rate of $24 possible. The municipal 10 per cent wage cut was not restored.

ARRESTS LOOM IN SLAYING

Ashby, Aug. 10—At least one, possibly two arrests were awaited momentarily today as the investigation of the murder of Walter R. Tanner, 80, swept towards a climax.

A youth who has been grilled several times in connection with the case is reported as one suspect police revealed. Much of the case against him depends, however, on tests that state police are now making on a flail found here.

The flail according to authorities is believed to be the weapon that slew Tanner. It is now at the State House in Boston, where Captain Charles Van Amburgh, state ballistics expert and chemist, is making tests.

Should this fail prove definitely to be the death weapon arrest will follow immediately, police said.

Tanner had been found dead in his bed last Monday. His skull was fractured and a trail of blood led authorities to believe that the fatal deed had been done in the barn nearby. Tanner was caretaker of the old Foster farm.

Dan Leahy Enters Race for Sheriff

A former Twilight League baseball star, Daniel P. Leahy of Cambridge, election commissioner, has announced his candidacy for sheriff of Middlesex county.

Leahy, a Democrat, in making the announcement said:

"The Middlesex county Republican ring is now just a broken doughnut."

Restaurant Cleanup Bans Singing Waitresses

Singing waitresses, wandering minstrels who "pass the hat," and shoestring restaurants operating solely for sale of liquor must go.

This was the plan of the Boston License Commission, which was joined today in its "clean-up" fight by representatives of the Massachusetts Restaurant Association.

The latest action of the license board was to suspend two licenses in the South End, and to order the restaurants affected to change to taxicabs. This edict automatically barred women and music, both of which formed the basis of complaints against these places.

STRICTER RULES SOUGHT

The Restaurant Owners' Association is going to the legislature, if necessary, for regulations that will make licensing bureaus tighten up on granting of applications, it was said. Applicants who go into the food dispensing business merely as an excuse for selling liquor are the ones aimed at by this move.

Miss Mary F. Driscoll only woman member of the Boston board, started the action against the singing waitresses and itinerant entertainers.

Many of the latter make the rounds of liquor places, offering cheap entertainment, then passing around the hat for contributions, she declared. She asked the restaurant association representatives to help halt this evil. They promised.

DOVER STREET CROWDED

The restaurants whose license were suspended were those of Thomas E. Anastasi and Albert Olesy operating side by side in Dover street. These are but two of the 16 places operating between Albany street and Shawmut avenue in Dover street, a distance of three blocks.

State ABC commission inspectors and South End police said that dancing women who got tipsy and unruly and loud music that brought crowds to the sidewalk in front of the places, were responsible for most of the Dover street troubles.

ON SANDWICH SOLD

At Olesy's place, it was testified, on two different nights between 10 p. m. and midnight inspectors saw only one sandwich sold. Police said that they were continually called to the place to round up troublesome drunks.

Medford School to Remove Fence

Because of protests against the erection of a high fence about the Medford high school on Forest street, a special meeting of the Medford school board voted to have the objectionable fence removed forthwith.

In its place a low hedge will be planted.

El Repair Man Hurt in Tumble

A five-foot fall into a repair well sent William Hagen, 56, of Taber street, Roxbury, to City Hospital suffering from a dislocated shoulder and a fractured right leg.

Hagen was working at the Bartlett street car barns of the Boston Elevated in Roxbury when the accident happened.

NEW YORK
DAY BY DAY

O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Aug. 10—Tonight while strolling: Never see a barefoot boy even in the slums. Rudy Vallee has the look of just stepping out of the shower. Those bonneted ladies with high laced shoes and black bags. Joseph P. Day doesn't even wear an overcoat with evening clothes.

One word description of Vincent Lopez — slippery. What became of Jerry the Greek? Pierre's should have a gay looking dining room on the park side. Two hotel menus list grape fruit McIntyre. Half a grape fruit centering a thimble of Worcestershire. And very tasty.

One of the last of the patricians, Creighton Webb. They say Billy Rose is on his second million. No one blends aloofness with condescension like a frock-coated floor walker. The crepuscular gloom of those dime-a-dance halls. And the rat-faced youths loitering about the entrances.

Roscoe Peacock and Alfred P. Sloan look alike. Never see Nils Florman around. Everybody mixes Howard and Harry Acton. William Lyon Phelps among the 42d street commuters. Old boys who lunch at clubs with nephews and ask family questions. And suggest Chekov's man who did not eat but partook of food.

One of my favorite people—Daniel Frohman. Mayor La Guardia's cigars are fiercer than George Jessel's. No more picturesque hotel man like John McE. Bowman. In fact there's not much of anything any more. Still what we had was heaps of fun while it lasted.

* * *

Broadway still misses W. C. Fields gnome-like stooge, Shorty. He was not only the comedian's handy man, foil and valet but best friend and severest critic. At his passing, Fields walked the streets dry-eyed for three nights trying to get hold of himself. Shorty, as his name implied, was a sawed-off runt with cap abaft, out-standing ears and nosed like Punchinello. One of those flotsam hangers-on around the stage doors who attached himself to Fields and would not let go. So spaniel-like was his worship he made himself indispensable. In stage days, Fields used him as comic relief in all his gorgeous tom-foolery. A chirky mite, pecking at crumbs, Shorty was the sparrow that fell!

* * *

Almost every theater used to have its Shorty who came out of the nowhere and, like a floating barnacle, made attachment and by sheer meekness became a part of the personnel. Shorty's rarely on the pay-rolls, responded to everybody's "Hey you!" working like beavers for the entire cast from star to property man. They managed somehow to be clothed and fed but their big reward was standing outside the stage door with a fat cigar and being the target for affectionate halloos of the company while the crowd gazed on.

* * *

Nearly every sport room of a newspaper, too, has a Shorty, slick and shining like a cicatrix. They have soaring ambitions but little talent, amiable in lieutenants and content to perform the inglorious chores. Their idols are usually the top sport writer with a by-line. Damon Runyon has one. So has Bill Corum. They give strangers the idea of vast importance and generally have an inside tip on the fourth at Latonia.

* * *

Private yachts have become a symbol of grandeur owners try to hide. Most palatial barques were used only for a short trip or so this season. Not more than a dozen made sustained voyages and such cruises were made with a soft pedal on publicity. Yachts do not blend with passed dividends. Yet yachts are no longer so expensive. A few worth $100,000 have been sold for as little as $5000 and there is, of course, Earl Carroll who, at the end of last season, presented his barque to the crew, with love and kisses! And they are still wondering what in the world to do with the darn thing!

* * *

For psychologists: In the mail so far this week have been letters from a dancer with a torn tendon, a singer whose voice has become a whisper, a painter who was off for Vienna on a cosmic eye specialists and a writer prostrate from twinges of neuritis in his writing arm. The thing most greatly feared, etc.

* * *

And there was Grock, the clown, who lived almost wholly on applause and grew stone deaf.

* * *

I just rushed into the other room to explain I thought I had heard someone moan. "Don't worry," said a familiar voice. "You still have all the moaning rights."

MAD MILLIONS -:-

Marian Tells Her Husband It Is Up to Him to Earn the More Money Needed

SYNOPSIS

Success crowned every venture of Jasper Ingram, wealthy promoter. Millions were at his disposal much to the envy of Homer Alspaugh, his confidential secretary, who has all he can do to meet mortgage payments and the gold-digging demands of his flirtatious wife, Marian. Cathleen McCarthy, beautiful young stenographer, substitutes for Ingram's secretary while the latter is on vacation. Visiting her husband's office, Laura Ingram meets Marian Alspaugh and, realizing she is the type who can wheedle money out of men, asks Marian to be cigarette girl at a charity garden party. Laura had been a middle-class girl and marriage to Ingram represented security; to Ingram, his wife was the coolly selected instrument for a purpose he had at heart.

CHAPTER IV

Turning into their own drive, Jasper and Laura saw their son walking across the lawn accompanie dby a girl whom Laura identified as "the little acting person—named Martin, or something like that."

"He seems interested," Ingram said.

The way Seward walked, the way he tilted his face to the girl, it would not have been plainer, had he worn a collar and chain that he was Arline Martin's captive.

"I do hope everything will go off well," Arline was saying. "It will mean so much to me if I can have a real success."

"Of course you'll be a success. I thought you were perfectly great in your rehearsal just now. It's a fine play, and I think the whole thing is going to be a knockout. I know it is!"

"It's sweet of you to be so en- ... ing," she murmured. "Any- ... s helped a lot to get me ... on! All the artistic element ... hanging on the opinion of ... ny at home is a bit ... for me. It's a wonderful spot ... in acting as I'm manager ... and I simply thrive on it, ... I don't know about the natural ... of it. I believe this whole ... has been helpful when ... men of its life. I was awfully ... to hear you around Miss Mor- ... I was here was something ... I could do anything I could ... for you. You'll let me know if there's ... I won't you?"

APPLAUSE PLANNED

She pounded her lovely head. She was almost as pretty, as she appeared to Seward's dazzled eyes. Beyond the harmony of delicate ... modeled features and appealing curves beyond the charm of youthful coloring he grieved to ... see her by the artful use of make-up, was the almost artistic ... of her eyes gray-blue as the depths of Arctic water and the low sun shining through it.

"You can clap tomorrow" she told him. "Then progress, now and ... Seward had tried to make it, had brought them to her waiting car. "I shall rely on you to be my personal claque. You know how it's done, of course—letting up a little and then come in strong ... you can nearly always start ... up all over again."

"I sure will," Seward promised ... what it was he necessary. You ... me without any help from ... me."

Arline gave the handsome boy her best smile as she slid behind the wheel of her roadster. It was Jasper Ingram's son and ... himself in a conquest of some importance. For Arline Martin was ... the make. Beneath the softness and gayety of her exterior she was as ruthlessly ambitious as Ingram himself. Whoever served her purposes was made use of. ... whoever was not useful, she discarded.

Her amusement made her honesty nervous about her success in the small circle of a society ... added to Arline's young actress, ... being a professional she was ... to the exaggerated acclaim ... of friends and shrewd enough ... to discount their enthusiasm. Yet of even half of what ... said was true, there ought to be a future for her.

HER BEST CHANCE

To appear under Mrs. Ingram's patronage, gave her, by far, the best opportunity to parade her talent she had ever had, for the Ingrams were not merely rich but ... decidedly influential in professional circles. Everyone knew ... Ingram's dream was interesting ... and the theater. He contributed largely to operatic and ... enterprises, therefore endorsements. Who knew but she might ... him?" If she played well, anything might happen.

Marian Alspaugh had good cards ... good partners that same afternoon. Her winnings, of course she had to leave behind her for chance, but she still had her hundred dollars. Naturally she would tell ... she had been cleaned out. ... drive home in high spirits ... was tuning her past the long ... and wall of the Ingram estate triangulefields.

Passing the wrought iron gates ... her eyes from the road ... slowly, and explored all there ... to see green velvet lawn ... shadows bordering the drive, ... and planned tree ... a flash of steel that was ... glimpse of an artificial lake and ... glint of the distant house ...

Marian had never been inside those gates, but soon she would know the secret beauties of those guarded grounds.

On the other side of the village, the unfashionable side, lived the Alspaughs. Marian had known no better when she urged Homer to buy that house. She had supposed that since the town was smart, any part of it must be all right. Now she was dismayed. They should have bought a place on the water front or at least near the Country Club . . .

MARIAN RAVES

"And what would be the point in that, seeing we've never been asked to join the Club—" her husband would inquire.

Marian raved at the dumbness of men. "Don't you see, that's exactly why we've never been asked? We live in the wrong section. If we haven't enough money to live where the real people live it's up to you to make more money. You didn't marry a hausfrau to sat shed to dig in a garden and meet you when you come out on the 5:17. I could be somebody in this town if you'd give me a chance."

But tonight as she drove the car into the garage she was almost cheerful. Even if she did live on the wrong side of the village it wouldn't be easy for the Country Club crowd to ... role her after ... met her at M... Jasper H. Ingram's!

She went into the pink house and into the living-room where Homer relaxed in one of the over-stuffed chairs, sat listening to the radio. All the furniture in the room was dressed in summer covers of ... ered creptone on a refectory table back of the davenport were scattered papers and magazines dealing with talking pictures. Copies of Vogue and Harper's Bazaar added an intellectual note. Other furniture included occasional tables and chairs, two bridge lamps and a bowl of flowers that need ed to be changed. The room was exactly like a million other rooms in American homes. Except for a couple of bright-jacketed novels from a rental library, there was not a book in evidence, nor indeed barring the cook-book in the kitchen, was there another in the house.

Marian switched off the radio and dropped down on the davenport.

"What shall I wear tomorrow?" she demanded. "That Dutch outfit I had last year?"

"That was cute," Homer said.

"Sort of tea-roomy, though. Maybe I could get a Cyrano costume, have the skirt made short and short sleeves and ... She said it would be all right to wear a summer dress. If I could run into town first thing in the morning and find something terribly chic and really good maybe ... all the women would think more of me."

"No, the more I think of it, the more I feel a grande dame effect is what I should try for—meeting all those Country Club people for the first time at Mrs. Ingram's ... Considering how important it is I guess you'll have to let me have some more money, Homer. I saw a dress in a Fifth avenue store the other day, perfectly plain, ... in dull pink, with the new sleeves and a high neckline."

TRADE VOLUME STILL HOLDING ABOVE 1933

Sentiment of Business Shifts to a Cheering Attitude

By Associated Press

New York, Aug. 10.—Trade vol- ume still is holding 40 per cent above the 1933 low, said the weekly Dun & Bradstreet trade review today, "in spite of the worst drought in the nation's history, the epidemic of strikes," and an unfavorable foreign situation. Busi- [illegible] shifted suddenly into a more cheer- ful attitude during the week.

"Most of the hesitancy which has been in evidence since the beginning of the third quarter," it continued, "is expected to be dispelled by the President's speed- ing of relief expenditures, par- ticularly for the drought-stricken areas and some formal announce- ment regarding the administra- tion's intention of making a strong swing to the right.

"Revised estimates of fall trade are almost uniformly in an up- ward direction, with indications that last year's volume will be exceeded and that profits will be more general, as the retailers have had the advantage of steadier wholesale prices this summer in assembling their mer- chandise.

"In most parts of the eastern states retailers had their best week's business since the latter part of June, the August promo- tional events and displays of early fall goods helping to enlarge the volume.

"Wholesale orders for the week were close to the high point for the year. The cooler weather en- abled many buyers to make trips to the markets which were de- ferred in July because of the in- tensity of the heat."

Best & Co. Shows $351,513 Profit

New York, Aug. 10—Best & Co. reports for six months ended July 31, 1934 net profit of $351,513 after depreciation and federal taxes, which after dividend requirements on preferred stock equals $1.51 a share on 206,000 shares of com- mon, against $180,694, or 56 cents a share on 200,000, for six months ended July 31, 1933. Net sales amounted to $6,097,817, against $5,- 225,972, an increase of 16.7 per cent.

Nationalization Could Create Many Millions in Money

By Associated Press

Washington, Aug. 10.—The amount of additional money which could be created as a result of sil- ver nationalization could reach many hundred millions.

Silver has not yet been mone- tized on any such ratio as the ad- vocates have urged, nor do experts believe a 16 to 1 or a similar ratio is likely. Sixteen-to-one would be well over $2 an ounce as com- pared to the declared 50.01 cents.

The policy also is still far short of that suggested by Congress in legislating a policy for one-fourth silver in the government's metal money supply.

The value of the gold now held is about $7,840,000,000, at $35 an ounce. Total holdings of silver are not known, but it is generally esti- mated that as much as a billion ounces of silver would be needed to bring the quantity of silver to Congress fully.

That would mean an expenditure of $300,000,000 in new silver cer- tificates. Such purchases are not at all likely. Estimates of a far smaller total indicate that there are [illegible] be 200,000,000 ounces, which would cost the government $100,000,000.

Silver certificates would be is- sued to that amount and might be as much as less than two times as much under the law empowering the government to value its silver at $1.29 an ounce. That would mean new certificates of about a quar- ter billion.

The government already holds several hundred thousand ounces of silver which may similarly be revalued, and if it let down the bars to imports it could obtain the additional silver needed.

The total value of silver required would be $1,950,000,000, or one- quarter of gold's value should 3,- 900,000,000 ounces at 50 cents.

Officials have given no indication they intend to go these greatest lengths.

LAMENT OVER ERRORS WASTE OF TIME

Senate Report of Little Value With Passing of Remedial Laws

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

Copyright 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.

New York, Aug. 10—The out- standing failure of the present is to confuse motives with consequences.

A wide-spread belief is that we would still be enjoying peak pros- [illegible] perity if [illegible] ethical [illegible] effect of our business men [illegible] and finance [illegible] were higher.

M. S. Rukeyser

Virtue would be the reward, in- deed, and should not de- pend on the profit motive. And a mar- of fact, the principal cause of the depression was eco- nomic - inher- ent long in base [illegible] ments, some of which grew out of the war period. The disparity be- tween agricultural and industrial prices was the most glaring of these trade destroying inequities.

If little diagnosis is correct, what we wasting precious time in la- menting the past errors, mistakes, and shortcomings of executives?

The piecemeal publication of the denunciatory report of the Senate committees disturbs confidence by raking over "old news" concerning human foibles and frailties.

From a practical standpoint, such publication is of little value, as the remedial and preventive legisla- tion, growing out of the investiga- tion, has already been enacted.

It is high time for the public to recognize that business must be judged by its occasional mistakes and shortcomings, but by its overall achievements. [illegible] provided and as the dispenser of the Ameri- can standard of living.

In this spirit, it will be recog- nized that business halting at this time, is confused and [illegible] ably means continued hardships for the unemployed, the partially employed, and those on govern- ment rolls.

But until [illegible] the Treas- ury economists long ago pointed out, in the existing status of un- employment and nationalistic ex- cesses in various countries, free trade would tend to pull down the higher stan- dards of the level of countries with low living standards.

This old truth has been restated in a report by Professor [illegible] an- nual report of the Netherlands Bank, whose position is:

"It is true that existing circum- stances that in no country in the world can economic forces be al- lowed to have free play; never- theless it should be emphasized that no country in the world can in the long run escape the influ- ence of changed conditions or af- fected to maintain a level of prices and a standard of living which are considerably above those of the countries with which they can compete in selling their products in the markets of the world."

This statement has a special meaning for the United States, which has long enjoyed consider- ably higher prices and average living standards.

If this country radically cuts tar- iffs and goes along the free trade route, it can expect average living standards to trend toward the level lower than the American standard.

In this country, with about 6 per- cent of the world's population, we have about one-third of the world's wealth and ordinarily in excess of 40 percent of the world's annual in- come.

Accordingly, if we decide to en- gage in a free for all competition with coolie countries, we shall tend to lower our standards and the net gains to outside countries, when equally divided, will be neg- ligibly small.

In view of these facts, it will probably be difficult for the ad- [illegible] to [illegible] advantage of the new legal right to cut tariff [illegible].

Texas, Aug 10 (AP)—Texas oil men were notified today by the Railroad Commission that the allowable production of new potential fields in the East Texas field have caused the commission to increase the allowable this area 7,000 barrels daily, to 1,130,000 barrels daily, more than 200,000 barrels daily were added to the potential by taking 131 wells off the proration list.

United States Smelting Big Silver Producer

The proclamation of President Roosevelt providing for the nationalization of silver does not appear to be a development of extraordinary importance to the United States Smelting, Refining & Mining Company, except so far as the 50-cent price to be paid for silver bullion stocks in this country tends to boost the world silver price.

It should be borne in mind that the company is still receiving 64½ cents for its domestically-produced silver mined since November 21, 1933, and this order of the Treasury Department is still in effect.

It applies, however only to approximately 2,000,000 ounces of silver annually imported by the company's Utah and Mexican mines. The great bulk of the output, or, say, 19,000,0000 ounces per annum, comes from Mexico, and on this portion it is received at the world price of 45 cents per ounce.

If the company has any unsold stocks of metal mined prior to December 21 last, and it may well have a limited quantity of such silver, it can now deliver same to the government and receive 50 cents an ounce therefor without any 30 per cent tax being laid upon the profit accruing therefrom.

In order that some idea may be had as to the benefits to be derived from a 50-cent price for silver (the world market is now 48¼ cents), we set down below figures showing the annual output of the company for the past five years and the average world price of silver for each of these years:

	Output, oz.	Average price
1933	21,472,000	34.73 cents
1932	23,824,807	27.89 cents
1931	24,500,617	28.70 cents
1930	23,819,178	33.15 cents
1929	20,696,745	52.99 cents

These figures do not include bullion treated on a toll basis where the bullion is received for refining only and the metals returned to the owners.

The world silver market has recently spurted about 5 cents an ounce. If one wishes to romance a little and apply the 5-cent increase to the current annual output, the earnings of United States Smelting Company are theoretically increased $2 share per annum on the 328,000 shares of common stock, less any increase in taxes here and in Mexico, and any increase in costs. It has always proved dangerous, however, to calculate increased earning power in this fashion.

Ralph D. Casey, acting chairman declared the committee is studying a general plan, but first is awaiting results of a survey of the East Texas purchase situation before deciding on anything definite. The survey is to determine feasibility of extending the East Texas purchase program, Mr. Collet said it is possible the committee might reach a conclusion on the matter within the next few days

Business for Silver Brokers

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said that "legitimate" dealings in silver will not be barred by the government's nationalization program despite suspension of operations on the Commodities Exchange, Inc., New York. "There will be business for legitimate brokers and dealers," he said, naming several available deliver firms as apparently unaffected. The treasury chief, however refused to commit himself on trading in silver futures. He said simply that the treasury was "operating on a long term basis" and was not worried whether the "short" reported silver is free of restrictions or not, but a free silver market would continue in this country. The reply was, "More or less."

U. S. BONDS ARE OFF SHARPLY

By International News Service

New York, Aug. 10—A sharp break in U. S. Governments unsettled the bond market today.

The slump in the federal list carried several issues down a half-point, and was attributed to withdrawal of the support buying which had been so important a factor yesterday. Garden Would Charge Bruins $80,000; Adams Threatens Shakeup

Redskins Summoned; Ruth in Boston Adieu; Grimes' Braves History

By AUSTEN LAKE

HERE'S FUN! BOSTON'S ICE HOCKEY folk, who should be thinking cool thoughts are running a summer fever

Austen Lake

The Boston Garden management is a sort of Siamese twin with patches on the knee. Has told Boston Bruins that it will cost them $80,000 to play home games in the North end Garden next winter.

As the Bruins have returned to stick to the old pine board league and saying how they will not pay rent or anything like it and how's them for parsnips?

So, it each side sticks stubbornly to its stand, it looks certain. The situation is subject to stalemate, is serious possibly signifying the sale of Bruins' stars separately to certain cities on the circuit. So says C. F. Adams.

THE GARDEN WANTS $3300 rental for every home game the Bruins play, as against less than the $2000 average the club paid last year. It cost the Bruins $80,000 for the Garden last year on a percentage basis.

Always anxious to know why, if the Garden only charges certain other sports promoters a nightly rent of $1500, why his rent should be more than twice that figure. The answer probably is, now that the Garden and Arena, only two available rinks, are joined in holy matrimony that they know the Bruins must pay or suspend play.

The latter course, Adams said today, was exactly what he will do. If they don't whittle down that price to a reasonable figure," he told me, "we'll lease our players around the circuit and put our franchise in storage. I've already had discussions with other teams, such as Chicago, the N. Y. Americans, and St. Louis."

Squeezing the Golden Egg From the Goose

THE ODD PART OF THE transaction is that Harold Dibiee, holdover manager of the New York group, is making the rental dicker with the Bruins, although well-established reports are that the Boston group, headed by Henry Lapham and George V. Brown, are shortly taking over the plant. The announcement, I hear, is to be made next week.

"I won't sign any agreement small or large, until I know who's sitting in the saddle," Adams says.

Since 1933, the Bruins have lost a total of $29,824.86 and the Cubs have dropped $28,656.20—figures taken from Adams' own ledger.

While I suspect that this is a preliminary skirmish between the Garden and its star boarder, I believe that Adams is determined to suspend hockey in Boston rather than be spiked down to a rent guarantee of $80,000. And certainly, if the Bruins move out, the Garden may as well put out the cat and nail up its shutters.

WHILE ON THE SUBJECT of sports costs, the Boston Redskins pro football clan is gathering from the far corners of the land. Thirty players are being brought on by bus for opening practice at Wayland on August 23. Bus fares will total nearly $1000 and the training season will cost another $2000.

To break even during the season the Redskins must draw an average of 18,000 to their home games, costing as it does $3500 to field the team, a minimum guarantee of $4500 for the visiting team and an 18 per cent cut off the top to Fenway Park. Except for New England race tracks, the business of sport promoting these days is riskier than wing walking without a parachute.

Ruth Waves Player's Farewell to Boston

THE NEW YORK YANKEES series at Fenway Park, opening today—the last of the season—marks Babe Ruth's farewell to arms here in Boston. The Babe, highly sentimental under his tough crust, will be playing for the last time on the grounds where, 21 years ago, he made his debut as a crude kid with gangling legs and knob knees. And the man who "discovered" him and started the lad on his career from St. Mary's industrial school of Baltimore, Brother Gilbert, who is now stationed at the Immaculate Conception parish in Malden, will be in the stands to witness the final passing of his old protege.

AS BURLEIGH GRIMES BECOMES a Pittsburgh Pirate for the third time—the usual number of times that a man comes to the surface before sinking to the depths—one recalls how Bill McKechnie had hoped to use him for trading bait in 1930 and how narrowly the Braves missed getting "Pepper" Martin, Paul Derringer and certain other Cardinal players.

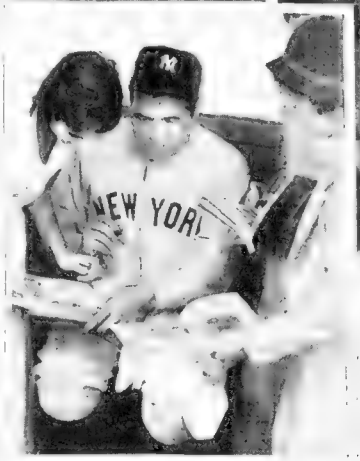
Branch Rickey of the Cardinals, unable to get Grimes from Pittsburgh himself, has promised Bill to give him Martin, Derringer and another player, if he (Bill) would buy Burleigh and turn him over. Yet when the purchase was made ($5000), the Braves syndicate of racers decided to keep Burleigh as a gate attraction despite that McKechnie knew he was hopelessly out of condition and did not want him around.

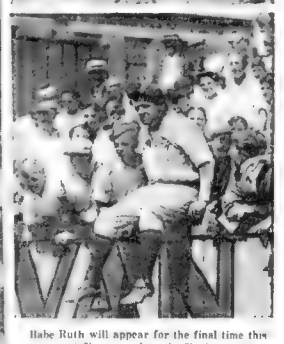
Finally, when Bill did convince his owners, "Pepper" Martin was on his way to stardom and Rickey would not let him go. Instead he palmed off Fred Frankhouse and Willie Sherdel. So that Bill, just the same, got all the better of the bargain. Sherdel has long ago drifted out of sight. And Burleigh is hanging on by his aged finger nails. But Frankhouse, still young and with 14 victories, is one of the leading pitchers of the league who would bring $75,000 in the open market any day the Braves wanted to sell.

A PECULIARITY OF THE LATE Wilbert Robinson ex-Dodger manager who died at Atlanta yesterday, was that he could not remember names. He used to call Val Picinich, his second catcher, "Picnic," and Ernie Lombardi, also a catcher, "Lumbago." Joe Shaute, pitcher, was "Chaute."

A surprising number of baseball men have had trouble as in the case of Judge Steve McKeever, Brooklyn pitcher, who calls everybody Judge. Once during the last world series Joe Judge was sitting in a room when Steve entered and hailed him with "Hy-la Judge." Joe, who had never before met the eccentric gentleman was amazed. "What a memory for faces," he said to Marty MacManus. "Imagine his remembering me!"

Curtain Prepares to Fall as King of Swat Makes Last Appearnce of Year at Fens





Babe Ruth will appear for the final time this season at Fenway when the Yankees open a series with the Sox. It may be the final appearance as a player for the Babe, as he may retire from the lists next season. He is shown in familiar poses during his glittering career, as a kid pitcher with the Sox, when he crossed the plate after one of his homers, autographing cards and perched on the bleacher railing with his gang.

The last time the Yanks were in town Babe Ruth was telling everybody that this would be his final season as a regular. Now he's talking about how many home runs he'll hit next season. And a year from now, we'll wager, he'll be discussing 1936 plans.

Yanks Invade Fens for Big Series; A. L. Flag Hopes Depend on Duels

By Joe Cashman

Somewhere beyond the view at Fenway Park, as we hoped the Yankees' 1933 pennant hopes [illegible] refresh your memory.

The New Yorkers came to town in mid-season for a five-game series with McManus' minions. They had an eight or nine game lead in the race. Already Colonel Jake Ruppert was receiving orders for world's series tickets.

"What will I do about these requests?" he wanted to know.

"Just wait until we're through with the Red Sox. Then we'll be out front by such a wide margin that you can safely give the order to have the duplicates printed," advised Pilot Joe McCarthy.

SOX TOOK FOUR STRAIGHT

The Yanks won the [illegible] though they weren't entitled to it. The Fenway flock took the next four in a row.

The leaders pretended not to be disturbed, but they never recovered from the shock. Secretary Mark Roth even threatened to [illegible] other railroad to bring them back to New York because one of the club's Pullmans was named "McManus". Within a fortnight the Senators were in first place and to be headed.

What has all this to do with the four-game series opening at the Yawkey Yard this Ladies' Day afternoon and which will mark the final appearance of Babe Ruth & Co. here this season?

YANKS HAVE FLAG HOPES

The boys from the Bronx come here on second place [illegible] back of the Tigers, who are now riding on the crest of a nine-game win streak. From Manager McCarthy down to the bat boy the visitors insist they're still very much in the race. And so they are. Just [illegible] are grouped with [illegible] of first.

For right after leaving here the New Yorkers go home to tackle the Cochrane crew and unless they're close enough to regain the lead in that series the battle for the hunting will be as good as over before the crucial games begin.

HOSE FIGHTING

Of course, the Yanks will [illegible] next week, no matter how they fare against the Sox or Tigers, but it's [illegible] Sunday [illegible] the Detroit [illegible] Sunday [illegible] be some that Ruth isn't [illegible] for.

And the McCarthymen appear in grave danger of losing ground in the local series, which consist of a single games today and tomorrow and a twin-bill Sunday.

Sharkey to Referee Wrestling Matches Winning Parlays

Keep Bookies Rich Yawkey Does Well On Hose Investment

By Jack Conway

SPEAKING of News: Jack Sharkey will pick up some easy money refereeing wrestling bouts. He will start at Manchester, N. H., next Wednesday night.

• • •

Al Gainor Is Favorite

The money may not be so easy if some of the husky wrestlers forget so much as to take a few punches at the chin of the former champion.

• • •

I hear Sharkey is also considering taking out a license to referee boxing bouts.

• • •

I HAVE met a dozen persons who want to know who will be the favorite when Al McCoy at Braves Field on next Thursday night. The name is Gainor. The reason His victory over Lou Brouillard at New Haven.

Mr. Boston

Gainor is a pretty fair boxer, and when he punches he shakes up the opposition to the very heels. He also rocks the heels to the stands. Especially if they bet on his opponent.

• • •

SOMEBODY has not suggested that when Babe Ruth retires he can go in for owning race horses. He gave the bookies plenty of money, with which to buy horses for themselves back in the carefree days when he was busting home run records and looking for an outlet for his $100,000 a year income.

• • •

Babe didn't have a care at the time he was operated upon seven or eight years ago. His sickness taught him a lesson. He established a trust fund, and is now sitting on top of the world. With the income from $60,000 coming in on quarterly installments.

• • •

A soda jerker in a spot on Summer street cashed in with $300 when he clicked with a parlay on Mad Bull, Macadam and Vested Power. I hope he wins a few more parlays and then buys the place in which he works. The cold records, however, prove he will give back the $300 and more.

• • •

A Boston bookie once told me that the fellow who plays parlays and $2 on the old beezer paid his overhead.

• • •

Beating the Races

CHICAGO O'BRIEN, 2d, once told me he often could beat a race but never beat the races. Like the famous Pittsburgh Phil he often bets on only one race in an entire meeting.

• • •

I asked O'Brien what he did with all the money he won at the track? "Bought Morgan stocks at their highs," he replied mournfully. "Everybody is a sucker in the other fellow's racket."

• • •

Dick Dunn opens an auto race track at Hartford, Ct., on Sunday afternoon. And should do well.

• • •

The Red Sox are still second to the Yankees in the matter of attendance figure in the American League. With Detroit a close third.

• • •

Tom Yawkey is doing very well with his $3,000,000 investment, thank you. And should as he had the courage to risk real cash during a depression period.

• • •

"The most remarkable thing about the recent Londos-George wrestling bout at Fenway Park," said Eddie Collins, "was the fact that only 2,000 of a 25,000 crowd departed before the bout ended at 2:40 a. m."

Sarah Faces Net Fight in Women's Singles; Doubles Final On

By Walter Kiley

Several tasty bits of tennis delectables are being served at Longwood this afternoon. And there's bound to be lots of fun before the finals of the women's singles and doubles and the semi-finals of the men's singles, doubles and mixed doubles in the annual Longwood Bowl tourney are concluded.

Whether or not Sarah Palfrey Wightman Cup star, is about to win her first Bowl title is the main issue to be decided. The Brookline miss meets the capable Jane Sharp of Pasadena, California, in the final of the women's singles.

Sarah has been taking it more or less easy all week. She explains that she was worn out after the Wightman Cup play and that she was coasting in order to be fresh for the national championship at Forest Hills starting Monday.

In Miss Sharp she takes on a veteran who will give and ask no quarter. Miss Sharp recent Essex winner has already disposed of several stellar players and seems to improve from day to day.

In the finals of the women's doubles the top-seeded team of Josephine Cruikshank and Mrs. John Van Ryn stacks up against the youthful Helen Fulton-Catherine Wolf combination which has been wreaking havoc with the early round fields.

Jack Tidball, blonde Hollywood invader, has been doing a bit of all right by himself throughout the week and as a result takes part in three important matches this afternoon.

He engages one R. Berkeley Bell in the lower half of the men's singles, then dashes over to do battle with Eddie Jacobs in the pairings against Lester Stoefen and George Lott in the semifinals of the men's doubles, and then continues his dual in the semifinals of the mixed doubles where he pairs up with Ruby Bishop against Jane Sharp and Lester Stoefen.

Should if we must base prognostications, the odds would favor Sarah a[illegible] and Jack Washburn, Boston drug

Young and Coolidge are dangerous for they reached the third round by beating Lewis M. Grimball and Frank Craven, as strong a combination as there was in the entire field.

As they are the scratch team of the field now that Dr. and Mrs. Wood and Dave Whitesides are out, Joe Lynch and Ken Corcoran will give away plenty of strokes to C. Canning and B. Stafford, a team which holds memberships here and at Fall River.

Lynch is playing from scratch and all that Corcoran gets in the way of assistance is three strokes. Both Corcoran and Lynch are [illegible] and his partner has ten. Helen Fulton Future Star of Court

By Walter Kiley

Few knew much of Miss Fulton, a tall, slim blue-eyed miss, before the records show that she turned in her first noticeable victory in winning the Switzerland women's championship at Interlaken in 1929. Later she won many important titles, including the Chicago women's singles and doubles, North Shore and Ohio State championships and the Wisconsin and Tri-State girls' championships. In 1932 she turned in the remarkable feat of capturing the aCnadian national girls' championship and the United States girls' title within a space of two weeks.

This season marks Miss Fulton's first serious efforts in women's play. On the present eastern invasion, she has already defeated such players as Baroness Levi at Easthampton and Norma Taubelo at Scarsdale. She was a finalist at Essex, losing to Jane Sharp, and was put out by Mrs. Painter at Longwood. Together with the equally youthful Catherine Wolf, they have created a sensation in reaching today's final round of the Longwood doubles, eliminating Norma Taubelo and Jane Sharp in the semi-finals.

When Mercer Beasley, Princeton coach and former coach of the American Davis Cup team, first took over the handling of Frankie Parker recently, the latter was in the habit of praying nightly before an important match that he would win. Beasley got him to change over to praying that he would play well instead, and the system seems to be having its merit.

Longwood members are staging a dance at the clubhouse tonight for the tennis players and their guests. It is an innovation in Bowl play which may become a fixture.

Parker has entirely recovered from the stomach attack which laid him low in his match with Van Ryn. In fact he has already left town for Lacerne, Maine, to take part in the week-end preliminary tournament to the important Newport event next week.

Nine years ago, Wilmer Allison, Longwood's No. 1 man, played his first tennis at the Brookline courts as an unknown player. His opponent was Arthur Ingalls, Longwood secretary. Yesterday, Allison relieved the occasion as he teamed with his father-in-law, C. A. Caswell of Texas, against Ingalls and Donald Barr of Texas.

Dr. G. R. Hubbard of Longwood is more than a glutton for punishment. Last Sunday he was in the palms of his feet at 6 a. m., drove to Mount Washington, climbed the high peak in a driving blizzard and then returned to Longwood to play a full three-set match.

Mercer Beasley was upset about the manner in which his stars, Frank Parker and Bitsy Grant, failed to live up to expectations, through sickness and exhaustion. Therefore, he has shown his regret in tangible form by entering Parker for next year's Longwood play.

PAPER PROFITS, BATTLING KNIGHT, SUSPICIOUS

PAPER PROFITS has only to run back to an one of her good form to annex. Duke efforts in order to reach the winner's circle. The daughter of Manager Tom was a little too much for placed in her debut over this course and that alone can be thrown out. BATTLING KNIGHT was third in his only outing over this course and with a little improvement will be all dangerous. SUSPICIOUS has a built lots of early foot and may be good enough to make the money a spell.

LISA BELLE, CANDY MAID, SNIFF

With a break in racing luck LISA BELLE would have been graduated from the ranks of the maidens of the recent Arlington Park meeting. The daughter of Sweet and Low tried as much as the best in that outing but was beaten a head on the wire by Toro Baby. CANDY MAID finished second to Legume in her last, and figures next best. SNIFF a first-time starter has been burning up the track in her morning trials and is to come up a good thing. Her Frank Carroll is in the handle.

ELDEE, STAROGAN, TELL WHY

ELDEE will have the services of the Jacobs boy, who knows nothing about doing those ones. STAROGAN will prove dangerous if he runs to his excellent morning. TELL WHY has several fair races to his credit and could spring a surprise.

WESTYS DUKE, SAND CLOUD, PALASA

WESTYS DUKE drubbed two foals of a similar calibre at Rockingham. Since then he has been training to excellent style and will parade postward as fit as hands can make him. SAND CLOUD raced well with $2000 top and bottom purses at Arlington Park and should finish in the contention. PALASA drubbed a cheap field at Empire City.

LIONEL, FRIAR MARK, BANNERS FLYING

LEONIE should have an easy time of this affair unless he has taken a long siesta in the Belair. I can't recall the S. W. Lazear contender ever running the route. The work has shown that he remains at his old time speed. FRIAR MARK was up against it with Biff and St. Kitts in his last outing but he finished fast.

JOE E. BROWN YEARNS FOR MUSICAL SETTING -:- DRAMA AT SUMMER RESORTS

Warner Gives Star Chance in 'What New York Wants' to Show New Talents

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright, 1934, Universal Service Inc.)

Los Angeles, Aug. 10—Joe E. Brown yearns to do a song, dance a few steps and take his place with the musical favorites of the screen world. And why not, when he used to be in musical comedies on the New York stage? Jack Warner has finally consented to let Joe E. be the bright and shining light in "What New York Wants."

The Warner writers are gathering around the hearthstone to set this idea to music. Joe E. plays a small town producer who goes to New York to produce plays—and then the fun starts.

Louella O. Parsons

Max Reinhardt is going to have a movie star for "Midsummer Night's Dream" or know the reason why. Charlie Chaplin cannot play "Puck" because he will be right in the middst of his picture, but Eddie Cantor can and probably will do so. Reinhardt's son is at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios and today he had luncheon with the big-eyed Eddie and put the proposition straight up to him. Eddie is intrigued with the idea and figures he can finish "Kid Millions" in time to accept the offer. He ought to be grand as "Puck" with his sense of comedy.

The Goddess, known as the statue of Liberty, who lights the way for so many immigrants who arrive at Ellis Island and who greets so many returning Americans in the bay, is to have a movie all her own. Paul Hervey Fox has written an original, "The Goddess," which deals with the status of Liberty and Ellis Island and he has sold it to Charles R. Rogers. Incidentally, it will be Mr. Rogers' first for Paramount under his new arrangement and it will co-star Elissa Landi and Cary Grant, who are also teamed in "Enter Madame."

Over on the Radio lot they are at last realizing the value of Irene Dunne's voice. Irene will be heard several times in "It Beats the Band," a musical written by George Marion, Jr., with Miss Dunne, Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire in mind. Miss Rogers, too, has a pleasing voice and Fred Astaire, as the world knows, for many years was featured in scores of New York musical comedies.

Irene Dunne

Right under our very eyes a terrific romance is growing and growing. "Big Boy" Williams has fallen and fallen hard for comely Barbara Weeks. Lucky for him that she returns his admiration. When Big Boy finishing playing in the Frank Borzage picture, "Flirtation Walk," at Warners, you may expect to hear that Miss Weeks has become Mrs. Williams. If all goes well, Big Boy and his bride will sail for Honolulu with the Frank Borzages on a honeymoon.

A Line Or Two

Sharon Lynne, who was threatened with a nervous breakdown a few months ago, is feeling happy and all right with the world again. She has signed for the second lead in "Enter Madame" and is ten weeks' engagement with Paschon and Marco. Everything is coming to her at once, including a lucrative radio contract. Ida Lupino comes back to a new contract at Paramount after her three months' leave of absence. She makes the trip to London to see her family. Henry Wilcoxon, who proved that he has what it takes to make a good actor in "Cleopatra," is booked for one of the important roles in "Lives of a Bengal Lancer." Young Richard Cromwell is likewise in this picture which includes so many important male actors.

Murder Drama Keith-Boston Feature

By HARRIS MORGAN

There is a seemingly endless parade of murders and mysteries, yet "Hat, Coat and Glove," featured on the new double bill at the Keith-Boston, proves the truth of the old adage that there's always something new under the sun.

A good deal of ingenuity has gone into the making of this smoothly knit and well sustained murder play, with the evidence of the crime depending upon the three articles of apparel which supplied the novel title.

Ricardo Cortez and Barbara Robbins are amicably separated at the beginning of the story, which finds the wife in love with a Greenwich Village artist who has been a bit of a philanderer for one so young. To his studio a determined young woman steps out of his past, just back from the Orient, where she has been unceremoniously deserted on a Chinese junk by the last in her line of beauties, lovely, impervious to his rude dismissal, she is desperate to the point of committing murder, including suicide, to stay there.

The girl is eventually found dead, and since his only alibi involves the married woman whose heart he loves, an honorable silence is the young man's only refuge. The defense rests with the ex-husband, a brilliant criminal lawyer, and the working out of the trial provides a decidedly novel solution. A weak and somewhat worried ending sends the awakened wife back to her husband, which should have made everyone concerned, including the lover who so nobly faced an unjust fate, wonder whether it was all worth while.

Dorothy Burgess steals off with the acting honors easily as the disillusioned villager who comes to such a disastrous end. Ricardo Cortez is distraught, stilted and unconvincing as the husband-lawyer, and John Beal, looking for all the world like a Lawrenceville sophomore taking himself too seriously, tries hard with the role of the magnetic young artist. A good comedy bit is injected by a third rate milliner who overcomes the fatal shot and makes a ready and all too willing witness.

On the same bill is "Manhattan Love Song," with Robert Armstrong in an amusing comedy as the chauffeur-butler for two ladies who lose and recover a fortune. Dixie Lee is featured in the cast.

Theater at Provincetown Is Beehive of Dramatic Activity These Days

By ANN AMES

The longest way 'round may be the shortest way home, but if you're Provincetown bound, the old geometric axiom works like a charm. Scores of theatrical stars have found out plenty about the shortest distance between two points. For the Wharf Theater is a beehive of dramatic activity, and time and distance important factors in the show game, winter or summer.

Everybody flies and with Lieutenant Parker Gray of the Grayl-Lord Air Lines and Pilot Bob Supple, time flies, too. Mary Young, Ethel Barrymore Colt, Margaret Hewes, Alan Dinehart, Sam Shipman, Brice Manfarlane, Don Rowan, Sam Levine and Mary Murray of "Dinner at Eight" fame, are all air-minded commuters from the tip of the Cape to town and back.

Parker Gray

Margaret Hewes flew up and back yesterday, completing arrangements in Boston for the premiere of "Pie in the Sky," new play by George Harris, scheduled for Monday night. A flying trip is all that the name implies these days. Twenty-eight minutes to the end of Cape Cod!

* * *

Quite the busiest guest author in Boston is Howard Lindsey. Mr. Lindsey's screen version of that grand college comedy "She Loves Me Not" is at the Met, where you may, if you're lucky, find him part of the time. While not exactly in training for the B. A. A. marathon, you might think so if you've watched his dash across the street to the Shubert, where he's spending more of his time engaged in re-writing and re-staging "Life Begins at 8:40," which if its gets better any faster will stop all traffic in New York.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is moving heaven and earth, as who wouldn't, to get W. C. Fields to play Micawber in "David Copperfield." Roland Young will be Uriah Heep, and if the rest of the casting measures up, Mr. Dickens may sleep peacefully on.

* * *

The traditions of the theatre never die. There's always someone, somewhere to carry them on. Frances Williams, whose blue notes have a meaning all their own, carried on at the opening of "Life Begins at 8:40" Monday night.

Miss Wynyard in Galsworthy Film at Keith's

By Joyce Dana

Admirers of John Galsworthy, and their number is legion, will be royally entertained at the Keith Memorial, where the new program features the late noted author's "One More River."

As it comes to the filme the story centers around Clare, lovely and abused wife of a brutal gentleman in Ceylon, and her friendship with Tony Croom. The stringency of the British divorce laws, together with the fact that family names, connections and positions make the very idea of separation and scandal abhorrent, mean that Tony's love must forever remain one of those deep unrequited passions, with the lady of his heart on a lofty pedestal to which no mere man may aspire.

Once back in England, Tony and Clare must make the most of a mere platonic friendship, until the less scrupulous husband has them trailed by a couple of snooping detectives, who quite promptly put two and two together to make four in any court of law.

* * *

Entirely innocent of the shocking charges, Clare and Tony, with the distinguished Corven family grieved but loyal to the bitter end, fight the accusations, only to find themselves defeated. After all the distasteful preliminaries, the two are free to fulfill their destiny together.

No more brilliant cast could have been assembled for a production that is dignified and paced in the leisurely style so urgently called for by "One More River." You may quarrel with Mr Galsworthy's conception of the frightfully correct characters who ride in Rolls-Royces and wear sables while they're on the brink of financial ruin, but you'll like the skilled manner in which these expert artists make even such a turn of affairs seem entirely plausible.

* * *

"One More River" holds a definite place in the sun of contemporary literature and its honor and position are fittingly maintained in a faithfully transcribed and well directed film play.

At Fine Arts

GRETL THEIMER, charming songbird of "Zwei Herzen," once more on the screen at the Fine Arts in "Schubert's Dream of Love."

Missouri Naps on Iced Beds

By Associated Press.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 10—For the benefit of those who have been wondering how Missourians sleep with the temperature 100 and better 24 hours a day:

A woman in St. Joseph, Mo., wrote a friend here that they pack their pillows and bed clothes in the icebox from early afternoon to bedtime.

Then they make their beds hastily and try to go to sleep before the bed warms up again.

Nature's Ice Box

Fort Collins, Col., Aug. 10—A three-inch layer of grasshoppers, their bodies well preserved in a snowdrift, has been uncovered on Long's Peak, west of here.

Two Features on Fine Arts Screen

The thrilling days of the French Revolution provide the background for "Danton," new German film featured on a double program at the Fine Arts. The amazing Fritz Kortner, whose striking screen characterizations place him in a class with Jannings, has the role of the fiery patriot leader, while Gustav Grundgens, another of the most finished of the German screen stars, plays the pale Robespierre.

The film is set against the exciting era of the revolution, colorful in its pageantry and remarkable for the excellence of its photography and directing. Clever casting, with Alex Granach as Marat, and Lucie Mannheim as Danton's aristocratic second wife, wooed and won while the revolution was at its height, is a lovely foil to the physically ugly leader of the people.

On the same program is "Schubert's Dream of Spring," a delightful musical romance, reminiscent of "Blossom Time," with Gretl Theimer, star of the ever popular "Zwei Herzen," as the charming heroine.

COOK-COOS

DOMESTIC DUTIES, or Practical Housekeeping.

Note—Today we take great pleasure in presenting a timely discussion from "The Universal Self Instructor," published in 1883. We hope that the reprinting of this piece will go far toward correcting some of the misconceptions that seem to linger in the minds of the "younger set."

YOUNG GIRLS seldom realize the fact that a knowledge of housekeeping is of greater practical value after marriage than the preservation of bright eyes and rosy cheeks, if they wish to retain the affection and admiration of their husbands.

No matter how slovenly a man may be himself, he generally desires to see his house kept in good order. He seldom invites his friends to visit him, if he is not sure that the parlor will be in proper condition to receive them. On the other hand, where he has good cause to be proud of the general air of comfort and refinement that his wife has managed to give his home, he will invite people to dine with him on the slightest provocation. His vanity is gratified by his wife's superior housekeeping, because he attributes it to his own personal influence. To a certain extent a husband is the motive power that propmts women to take pride in their domestic duties, for the desire to please and the love of admiration is only human nature, and especially characteristic of the female sex. Man is a creature of habit, and after he is married and settled in life, there is nothing that so attaches him to his loving helpmate as a pleasant, comfortable, and refined home.

The many discoveries and inventions, the added conveniences to the house, make the drudgery of the past century unnecessary, so that the "daughters of Eve" can always combine supervision of their households with the pursuit of art studies, scientific research, or some money-yielding branch of industry.

On the other hand, there's nothing stingy about the way Republican orators are describing the Administration's extravagance.

Night Sales Draw Throng to Paine's

The fact that more than 400 persons attended Paine's Furniture August sale, between the hours of 6 and 9 on Wednesday evening, indicated interest in renewing the home and points definitely to freer spending and reviving business.

These Wednesday "open nights" at Paine's, a comparatively recent feature, were inaugurated with the idea of broadening the service of this store by enabling those employed during the day, as well as couples unable to shop together at any other time, to avail themselves of the traditional value opportunities offered at this season.

Death on Wings

Screen Your Dwelling Against It

HOW THE COMMON HOUSE FLY LOOKS UNDER THE MICROSCOPE

Musca domestica, science calls the terrifying insect whose more-than-life-size image appears above.

To most of us it is known as the common house fly—an annoyance at most, not terrifying.

Yet it may be and often is a messenger of death. Unless guarded against, it can kill as certainly as a bullet.

In Jersey City, where sixty persons have been sent to the hospital in the last few days with dysentery and five children have died of the same disease, the house fly is being held responsible by health authorities for the epidemic.

Massachusetts localities have reported scattered outbreaks.

Boston may be similarly menaced unless prompt measures are taken to guard against it.

Windows should be screened. Refuse and garbage should not be allowed to collect. All receptacles for waste should be covered and kept covered.

These are simple things to do and effective if done. The difficulty is to get them done, generally, throughout the city.

But they must be done if we are to avoid the danger of widespread disease this summer. An epidemic once started is hard to check. The true cure for it is to prevent it.

We assume that the Health Departments are "on the job" to meet this situation. That is what they are paid for. But the Health Departments alone can do little. They must have the co-operation of all citizens.

DO YOUR PART, therefore.

Observe the few rules mentioned above.

You will help to safeguard human lives and YOUR OWN WILL BE AMONG THEM.

Fiedler Explains Hitler

He may not know it, but Arthur Fiedler explained Adolf Hitler, far better than did any foreign correspondent, the other night when he played a Wagner program in the symphony shell on the Esplanade.

"The Ride of the Walkuere" tells the whole story of the man who has made himself the master of the most intellectual nation in the world. The music is weird and terrifying and chaotic.

It moves forward crasily in uncertain jerks, but ruthlessly, growing wilder and wilder. That streak of 'Schrecklichkeit"—horribleness—is the skeleton in the closet of German character. At its best it produced Richard Wagner. It also produced ruthless submarine warfare, and now Hitler.

It explains how the Austrian paper-hanger, a strutting demagogue, gained power over a people famed for their "Gruendlichkeit"—thoroughness—and "Gemuetlichkeit"—love of calm and comfort.

Every traveler, of course, knows that the first hard virtue belongs to the northern Prussians with their old Teuton blood, and that the second can be found in the South. It is largely amongst the Prussians that Hitler has his strength, even if his "Brown House" is in Bavarian Munich.

The South German accepted Hitler because he was desperate. Ever since the war, Germany has been pinched and oppressed. Other men were put in high office, but they brought little relief. Well, maybe this Hitler can do it, thought the average German. So he gave him a chance. And the Wagner streak in him caused him to admire the man at times.

But the Wagner note is not the dominant one in the German character. Bach and Beethoven were Germans, too. Sooner or later the country is going to rid itself of "der Fuehrer."

It is going to restore its respect amongst the nations under a hero of the Hindenburg mold and wipe out the shame of years under the "Brown Shirt" clown. Perhaps sooner than the world expects.

Coast Guard's Radio

One of the most powerful radio stations on the Atlantic seaboard is that of the United States Coast Guard in Winthrop.

This station, with its ability to pick up distress signals from little fishing craft far at sea and then direct the nearest patrol boat to the scene, has been of inestimable benefit to shipping.

Yet, for some unknown reason, Washington has directed that it be turned over to the Navy. It will continue to hear distress signals and it will "co-operate" by turning them over to the Coast Guard.

Everybody, who knows how the Navy and most other government departments function, also knows that this co-operation will mean a great deal of red tape and loss of time.

Coast Guard men are indignant that their efficiency should be crippled in this way, but, like good government servants, they keep their indignation to themselves.

The general public, and especially all persons interested in shipping and safety on the high seas, need not be so timid. The government is their servant.

They should protest vigorously against this transfer of the Winthrop radio station to the Navy, a move that would be justified only in time of war.

New England Eggs

An account was published recently of the successful shipment of eggs from California, 3000 miles into the Boston market. The freight rate was four cents a dozen.

New England producers marketing eggs graded as strictly fresh have no fear of such distant competition. In most of these northeastern states you can be prosecuted for selling as strictly fresh an egg more than five days old.

We pass along the suggestion of Department of Agriculture workers that our farmers specialize on production of brown eggs. The California eggs are white.

BELIEVE IN YOURSELF

Every day it's harder to write this column. For what can I say? What can I say that will mean anything?

Elsie Robinson

Straight before me—each time I sit down—staring at me across this typewriter—is that darkening wall of Faces. Angry Faces. Bewildered Faces. Rebellious Faces. Faces of a world caught in panic. YOUR faces among them. What can I say to those Faces? What can I say to YOU!

What can I say that will be sincere and sound—that will help that gnawing need which goes on and on, under the laughter and excitement, the tantrums and tears?

KNOWS NEED

I know what that need is. I've been poor, too, out of work, frightened, furious. I've stood on a street corner and watched rich, comfortable, complacent people strut by . . . and thought of my sick boy . . . and tasted bitterness like salt along my lips.

I've slept on park benches and the baked earth of deserts, not knowing what the next day would bring. I know that gnawing for some answer—some hope. But what can I say?

Something funny? Something pretty? Funny words and pretty words are an insult to desperate people. Even the laziest, dumbest, most indifferent of those Faces knows that he needs something more than that.

Something more real than words, deeper than wisecracks . . . something strong and clean and true to which a frightened person can cling—believe in—work for . . . something that wage cuts and strikes and riots can't destroy. But what? What can any of us hold to these days?

That's a terrible question. Those Faces are all asking it. You're asking it—I'm asking it. Every time I sit down to this typewriter I wish I knew the answer. Oftener and oftener, lately, I sit here all night, waiting for the answer—

This morning, just before dawn, it seemed to come. As plainly as though I could touch you, I saw you . . . waiting as I was waiting . . . feeling, as I so often do, that everything had come to an end. That there's nothing left to hope for . . . nothing you dare believe in . . .

SEES ANSWER

Suddenly, in that clear, still light which comes just before the sunrise, I saw—for a flash—the answer. I saw that there is something which hasn't been destroyed, which can never be destroyed. Something you can always believe in.

You could always believe in yourself.

Not in that Self the world sees . . . that Bill Jones or Sally Smith Self . . . that bundle of personal notions and mannerisms you've acquired through your family, school, church, political party, social position, job.

You can't believe in that Self. That Self isn't trustworthy—or lasting. It changes with every circumstance. The flattery, or the betrayal, of one person can completely change that Self.

But there is something in you which doesn't change . . . which isn't affected by the favor of falsity of other people, or even your own weakness . . . Which doesn't depend on position or power or money. And that is your own secret dream of Beauty.

What sort of Beauty? That depends on you. Each man has a different idea. To one man, Beauty means a shining vision of universal Justice. To another, it means days filled with simple friendliness.

To another, order, discipline. And to another, it means simply some good job well done. The form of the dream does not really matter. The important thing is this—

HEALING FOR HURT

We carry within our own hearts—each one of us—an answer for our hunger, a healing for our hurt.

No matter what happens to us, no matter how others mess up our lives, or we mess them up ourselves—there is something which will never fail us, which cannot be destroyed, which will always make life worth the living.

Hold fast to your own dream of Beauty. Believe in it. Make the most of it. Withdraw within it. Always—whatever comes—you will find it waiting . . . a quiet, cool garden, walled against the filth and blood stains of a rising world.

'Gossip' Whispers Story

-:- -:- By Winifred Black

Mrs. John W. Something or Other is worried! She's terribly worried.

So sometimes when her husband is busy down at the store on Saturday night, she just walks around the house and worries and worries.

I know she does because she wrote and told me all about it. And what do you think it is that worries her so?

Winifred Black

Is her husband cruel to her? Does he neglect her and let all his friends know that he is crazy about the little blonde girl at the notion counter?

Not at all!

Husband seems to be a very decent sort of man.

Is there poverty, sickness, some incurable ailment in the family?

Why the idea—it's nothing like that at all.

Mrs. John W. Something or Other is worried because somebody told her something awful about her dearest friend and Mrs. Something or Other doesn't know what to do about it.

"I love my friend," says Mrs. Something or Other, "she's such a generous, kind-hearted woman. She is always laughing and good natured and she is so pretty I just love to look at her. Her husband is a splendid fellow, too. My husband likes him almost as much as I do—his wife.

"We had such good times together, the four of us, and we have been planning a nice little motor trip together this summer.

"At least we were going to—but now it's all spoiled.

"A woman came here visiting and she and I were talking one day and she told me she knew my friend before she was married and there was a lot of talk about her in the town where she lived.

"She and her husband went together a long time before they were married and people said—"

And Mrs. Something or Other could just cry her eyes out. She hates to give up the trip and yet how can she be seen going around with a woman who's been talked about? She wants to know what to do.

Well, now, Mrs. Something or Other, what should you do?

In the first place your friend is very pretty and very popular. How do you know that this woman isn't jealous of her, and is trying to get you not to go on that trip just because she would like to go herself?

What kind of friend are you anyway to leave the first time some stranger tells you about someone you are supposed to love?

And who are you to sit up and pass judgment on a kindly, good-hearted woman who's a good wife now—no matter what she has been, and a good friend to you, too?

What business is it of yours, anyhow?

Do? I'd invite my friend to my house and have a cozy luncheon and discuss who's going to get breakfast over the camp fire and just what to take along and what to leave behind.

And I wouldn't take any silly suspicions in my bag either.

And—whisper—wouldn't it be a joke if the woman who told you the things about your friend had told her the very same things about you!

BROADCASTING

When Patti sang long years ago
Only the rich could hear her voice,
But few her gift divine could know
And in her artistry rejoice.
The charm that music holds for all
Was from the many shut away,
Imprisoned fast by roof and wall,
For only those with coin to pay.

The limit of her power was then
No farther than the outer wall.
Gay women and complacent men
Were ticketed into the hall,
But Patti's voice was never heard
By those troubled and forlorn.
No distant doubting heart was stirred
Exultantly to face the morn.

Last night another artist sang,
As Patti in the long ago;
Her voice melodiously rang
In curious places high and low.
A priest put down his book to hear,
A sailor listened far at sea.
And many a sad heart caught the cheer
Of that exquisite melody.

Across the land that song was swept;
An invalid forgot his pain,
A woman in a brothel wept.
Along that great broadcasting chain
Innumerable lonely lives
Were sharers in that gift sublime,
And even the dreariest of dives
Held beauty for a little time.

Human Side of the News; Horse Races Appeal

By Edwin C. Hill

Saratoga, colorful stage of so much of the romantic and the dramatic in American history, is alive again, revived in its oldtime glories by the return of the thoroughbred, King Horse.

Little changed in fifty years, redo'ent still of the perfumed curls of the crinolines of a century ago, it wakens from the drowsiness of a year to the thunder of the galloping hooves of the fastest equines of the Bluegrass and of the Old Dominion.

It stirs again to the roar of the crowds, that breath-taking, thrill-making roar: "They're off!" It settles down for a month of devotion to the creature which has been the intimate friend of man, his companion in history, story and song, for ten thousand years.

MORE THAN GAMBLING

After all, there must be more to the appeal of horse racing, whether it be the machine-like speeding of the artificially-gaited trotting horse or the swift, swallow's flight of the slim, dainty-footed Kentucky thoroughbred, than the mere excitement of speed or the feverish thrill of gambling.

There must be something about it which goes deep down into the very roots of the human race, something very ancient in the way of admiration for man's inseparable companion on every high adventure, from King Solomon and his great war horses to the mailed charger of Cortez and the swift steeds of Paul Revere and of Phil Sheridan at Winchester.

For the horse, as well as the man, is a hero of romance, as the French well knew when they built the phrase which coupled the two: "preux chevalier."

It is fascinating to dig back through history, through the doings of mankind in every age, and glimpses the part his horse had played. Mr. H. S. Skeffington has done so, at infinite pains, in the Irish Press. He tells us that the gods themselves had Pegasus, the winged horse of the poets.

SOME FAMOUS STEEDS

The heroes of antiquity had their beloved and famous horses, pure white or night-black, dapple or dun. To name but a few: Bucephalus, Alexander's charger, to whom he alone could mount, for whom his master built a city for his mausoleum, called Bucephala; Ballos, Achilles' steed, of which Homer tells that it wept hot tears when its charioteer was slain.

Horses are mentioned frequently in the Bible. The Book of Job has a fine description of a war horse. King Solomon had 40,000 stalls for horses. In Chaucer's Tale of the Canterbury Pilgrims, the poet most carefully assigns to each pilgrim, according to his or her estate, character, disposition, a particular steed.

The "verray parfait gentil knight" for instance, had, as became his modesty, "a good hors, but he was nought gay"; while the pleasure-loving Wife of Bath, "upon an embiers eesly she sat!"

Spenser's Fairie Queene has many mentions of noble steeds and their riders, from the gentle knight "pricking" ("riding with spur) on the plain in search of adventure to the fair villain clad in scarlet red.

"Her wanton palfrey all was overspread
With tinsell trappings woven like a wave
Whose bridle rung with golden bells and bosses brave."

Of Una and her "unhasty beast" we learn (unhasty not used in a derogatory sense, but meaning quite mild) and so through the Fairie Queena on the many mystic adventures of the Red Cross Knight, of the fair Una and Florimel, there are always references to courses and chargers, to palfreys and steeds.

BELOVED BY BARD

Just as no tale of chivalry is complete without a slain dragon and rescued maiden, so the horses that bear the knights to high adventure must be named and their comparisons described at length. They share in the sufferings, privations, wounds and final victories of their masters. Their beauty, color, flowing manes and tails, velvet lips, shining eyes and glossy coats are described in the same detail as the listed beauties of the heroines with the same eloquence.

Shakespeare knows every point about a horse. While lovers of the hard are doubtful as to his feelings about dogs, there can be no doubt about his love and sympathy with horses.

Scott tells the weird tale of the Wild Huntsman, and Shelley tells of the Spectral Horseman.

"Thus does the dragon who, chained in the caverns,
To eternity curbed of the champion of Erin."

Swift places horses, in that grimmest of his adventures of Gulliver, in command, the noble Houyhnnms (horses) ruling over the debased Yahoos chief and his favorite white horses seen on Mayday morning gliding over Killarney Lake to the accompaniment of unearthly music.

More intimately linked up with man's adventures are the trophy of Paul Revere's great ride and of Sheridan's famous lightning journey that has the beat of a horse's galloping hooves in every stanza — to the final victory:

"With foam and with dust the black charger was gray,
By the flash of his eye and his nostrils' red play
He seemed to the whole great army to say:
I have brought you Sheridan all the way
From Winchester down to save the day."

Roosevelt, Farley Bidding For Insurgent Support

By James T. Williams, Jr.

So far as President Roosevelt's addresses go, politics is for the time being adjourned. He is emphasizing the devastation wrought by the drouth. He is making it evident to his audiences that he believes the national emergency, which he proclaimed when he entered the White House, still exists.

Altogether different in tone and terms is the politicial-chairman-Postmaster General, Mr. Farley, in his state after state, Mr. Farley, in his speeches, has emphasized the amount of relief money which his party is spending in that area —speeches which have given rise to the Republican rejoinder that any party ought to be able to sweep the Congressional elections which has at its disposal the largest campaign fund in history.

COMMON OBJECTIVE

On the surface the strategy of the President and his chief politician appears to be in conflict, but it will probably soon appear that they have a common objective.

This is the retention within the Democratic ranks of the minimum number of Republican insurgents who left their party in 1932 to vote against Hoover or for Roosevelt. The excuse offered at the time by many of these voters was that the country was in the midst of a great emergency, and that to wage effective war on the depression party politics should be forgotten.

In the Congressional campaign now on Mr. Roosevelt, as the titular leader of the party in power, is doing his best to encourage his Republican supporters to believe that the emergency is still on and that they should continue to follow his leadership until the country enters again the promised land of prosperity. He is leaving to Mr. Farley the political harangues that appeal to the thick-and-thin Democrats who vote the straight ticket year after year with Tammany regularity.

PROGRESSIVES ENCOURAGED

If the Roosevelt strategy succeeds this year, and there is every indication that the Democrats will increase their majority in the Senate and not lose many seats in the House, the way will be cleared for an intensive and country-wide campaign during the next two years to make permanent converts of the millions of Republicans who left their party in 1932 to vote against Mr. Hoover by voting for Mr. Roosevelt.

Meantime President Roosevelt is availing himself of every opportunity to encourage the re-election to the Senate of those progressive senators who left their party two years ago to support him.

He is encouraging them and their followers to give permanent allegiance to the Democratic party by filling minority vacancies on bi-partisan commissions with Republicans whom they recommend. He is encouraging the Democrats in a number of states to choose candidates for the progressive Republican candidates who have been provided that candidate supported him in 1932.

His strategy is weakening the Republican party all over the country. It is preventing Republicans from exercising any influence even as a minority party, on the course of the administration. It is encouraging Republicans who were for Roosevelt in 1932 to remain with him in 1936 in the hope that by 1936 they will be ready to exist in their lot permanently with the Democratic party.

President Roosevelt is not content to look forward merely to a re-election for a second term. Other Presidents, both Republican and Democratic have achieved that honor. He is believed to cherish the larger ambition of building up the Democratic party of the country, not for the duration of the emergency but for years of prosperity that it is hoped are just ahead

ADJOURN POLITICS

If the President succeeds in this ambition he will have a high place in history not only as a popular leader during one of the cleverest politicians who ever attained the White House. He will have done what Woodrow Wilson failed to do—leave behind him when he completes his second term a dependable party that is no longer a minority party except in emergencies but a normal majority party of the country over.

The next step in this strategic campaign is to encourage the election of both Houses of the next Congress of as many Roosevelt Republican senators and representatives as possible.

Thus the administration is now doing upon the plea that the emergency still prevails and that in the war on the depression all voters should adjourn politics and "stand by the President."
